INQUIRY INTO GASOLINE PRICE IS PROPOSED

Suggested Four Western Provinces Act; No Federal Move, Says Labor Minister

Ottawa, Oct. 9.—The Dominion Government has not received a request for an investigation of gasoline on which it could act, it was stated to-day by C. C. Stewart, Minister of Labor. Informal demands for a gasoline inquiry had been received from individuals, but no provincial government or group of persons had petitioned for an investigation, he said. Under the Combines Investigation Act a petition must bear a stipulated number of names or come from a provincial government before it might be acted on by the Dominion.
The Minister of Labor was commenting on a Regina dispatch quoting Hon. A. C. Stewart, Minister of Highways of Saskatchewan, who said that in the event of the federal government failing to investigate gasoline prices, a provincial inquiry by the four western provinces might be considered.

Regina, Oct. 9.—An inquiry into gasoline prices will be considered at the conference of the four western provinces to be held in Calgary October 19, according to an announcement here.
Hon. A. C. Stewart, Minister of Railways, stated that although the matter was now before the federal government as a result of his representations at Ottawa recently, the possibility of four western provinces carrying out an investigation in the event of the federal government's failure to investigate the matter would be considered.
The resolution seeking an inquiry into the gasoline prices which was passed at the last session of the Saskatchewan Legislature asked an investigation to be carried out by the four provinces.

CAR DRAWING CHARGE FAILS

The book which I was writing and also wrote on the ticket, Mr. Harris testified.
"I put out my hand to take the ticket. The accused said, 'You put this part in the box.' I said, 'Give it to me. I am not interested in drawing.' I paid 50 cents for the ticket at the end of the transaction. The accused wanted to take back part of the ticket, and told me, 'You will have no chance in the drawing.'"
Mr. Henderson asked: "You did not buy that ticket for the lottery?" and was told "No."
Mr. Henderson asked: "You bought that ticket for the entrance to the exhibition?" and was told "Yes, but I did not use it." The ticket was sold to me for the purpose of the drawing, but I did not use it. The ticket was produced in court.
Other witnesses for the prosecution were Samuel R. Hanks and Chief of Police Thomas Heatley.

BUYER INFORMED
Judge Lampman asked Mr. Harrison: "How can you make out a case when the accused told the buyer he was not going to get anything? The statement was all a part of a mixed-up transaction."
Mr. Harrison argued that the act of selling was a separate act, but Mr. Harrison argued that the act of must be two parties to a sale, and that Mr. Harris had specifically stated he was not interested in the lottery. He also pointed out that my evidence was before the court that a lottery had actually been conducted.
"My strong position is this: A sale must be of a specific article, but for a specific purpose. The burden of proof is on the prosecution, this is not like liquor or drug offences, in which the defence has to bear the onus of disproving the charge."

BAIL REFUSED
When the verdict was announced accused arose in the dock and requested bail pending an appeal.
Bail was not permissible after the verdict had been announced, the judge told him.
The Courtroom was filled with spectators to hear the verdict and Sheriff Goggin issued a warning that no demonstration would be allowed.
Mr. Justice Murphy remanded the accused until the close of the Assizes, and he was taken to the city police cells to await sentence.
He was arrested last July by officers of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police following investigations into distribution of communistic material at Work Point and the Naval Barracks.
Accused conducted his own defence during a trial, the prosecution being handled by A. M. Johnson, K.C.

Shawnigan Lake, Oct. 9.—Shawnigan will celebrate the opening of the new Athletic Hall there to-morrow evening. It will be recalled that the old hall was destroyed by fire a year and a half ago.
A great effort has been made to replace what had come to be known as one of the finest community halls on the island and this has now been accomplished. The new hall is situated on the same site but is a larger and more modern structure. The main hall is 50x94 and the small hall attached in the form of an ell is 32x35. The main hall has a stage and dressing rooms, a gallery and cloak room and a large dancing space of 60x70. The building is electrically lighted and has modern sanitary arrangements, including shower baths. It will be used for a number of people will attend from Victoria.
C. H. Dickie, M.P., representing the district in the Federal House, and Hon. R. H. Pooley, Attorney-General for the province, will attend. The event marks an important advance in the community life of the district.

LEAGUE-U.S. MOVES TO END JAPAN-CHINA DISPUTE

Recent rumors to the effect that fifty Japanese warships had been concentrated at southern Japanese bases ready to sail for China were being dispelled by the annual maneuvers being held off Kure Island. It was said these maneuvers had ended and the ships were returning to their home bases. The cruiser Tokiwa, of 9,700 tons, to-day was bringing a landing force of 400 troops and their equipment to Kure. It probably will be sent to Hankow soon. The Tenryu is a swift-craft of 3,200 tons.
Japan naval forces on the spot or approaching China to-day included four cruisers, five destroyers and seven river gunboats, stationed at Shanghai, Ningbo, Nanking, Wuhu, Ichang and Chungking. Excluding the Tokiwa's complement the ships at Shanghai at present have a landing force aggregating 700 besides their crews.
Minister Shigemitsu said violent demonstrations against Japanese at the conference of the Japanese, Chinese, and Yunnan, capital of Yunnan province, had compelled him to order the Chinese to withdraw to Chungking. Shigemitsu said that French Indo-China, Japanese residents in those places previously had left.

CROWDS AT CONSULATE
At Chengtu the demonstrations were especially bitter. Crowds surrounded the Japanese consulate, the minister said, shouting threats and insults and covering the walls with posters vilifying Japan.
The note which Shigemitsu carried to Nanking said the anti-Japanese agitation "seems to be assuming alarming proportions" and declared the "Chinese government will be held responsible for whatever may be the consequences of its failure to suppress and afford adequate protection of the lives and property of Japanese subjects in China."
It further asserted the anti-Japanese agitation "constitutes a serious instrument of national policy under the direction of the Nationalist Party, which, in view of the peculiar political organization of China, is inseparable from the government."
"The movement must therefore be distinguished from one originating spontaneously among the people," it described as REPRISAL.

ALASKA ROAD COSTS UNDER DISCUSSION
The United States delegates arrived yesterday and were received by Premier Tola. They included Major Malcolm Elliott, president of the Alaska Road Commission; Ernest W. Sawyer, executive assistant to the Washington administration; and Herbert H. Rice, formerly vice-president of the General Motors Corporation.
Hon. George Black, Speaker of the House of Commons, Ottawa; J. M. Wardle, chief engineer of the federal parks branch; and George F. Napier, chief engineer of the Department of Public Works are the Canadian delegates on the committee.
U.S. advocates of the road voiced the opinion that Canada would reap a reward for its proportion of expenditure in providing the route to the wealthy country of Alaska. Rich in resources lying dormant because of transportation problems, Alaska, which was rapidly building up an extensive internal road system, was suffering from lack of an outlet and if it secured this there would be a steady stream of travel which would pass through British Columbia. In addition, Alaska, as a land of romantic popularized in fiction, would be a magnet for thousands of tourists yearly from whom British Columbia would benefit, they say.

COLWOOD VENUE OF MID-WINTER GOLF TOURNEY

Last February the competition was played over the course of the Victoria Golf Club at Colwood. Mr. Matthews said to-day that the tournament, growing in popularity each year and the indications are that the entries for the tournament for this year will be the case in February of this year. The midwinter tournament in Victoria is conceded the same parity with the tournament for the Prince of Wales and Wilkinson trophies held at Banff National Park each summer, and wide publicity is being given to the contest.
There is a possibility that some of the first-class amateurs who played in the Prince of Wales Cup competition at the Banff Springs course will be seen in action in Victoria during the February tourney. It is expected that eastern and prairie amateur players will be on hand to participate in the play for the Royal Colwood Golf Club trophy. Matthews will meet Capt. Walter Farry of the Royal Colwood Golf Club to complete arrangements for the forthcoming tournament.
The Yuletide Festival, which is attracting more attention each year on the prairies and across the international border, will be featured with the usual festivities between Christmas and New Year's, it was announced by Mr. Matthews.

When asked about tourist travel this year, Mr. Matthews stated that the O.P.N. mountain resorts at Banff and Lake Louise had experienced a very good season. The season just closed was on a par with last year. More Americans had visited the national parks of Canada than the national parks in the United States, it had been shown by statistics during the February tourney. It was reported that a particularly busy season, the July business at the resorts had been unusually heavy. Mr. Matthews plans to remain here for a few days before returning to Winnipeg.

Sakurada, Accused of Watanabe Killing, Declares Hitomi Committed Crime

Canadian Press
Vancouver, Oct. 9.—Taking the witness stand in his own defence to-day, Shinkichi Sakurada, fifty, on trial in the Assize Court here, charged with the murder on March 29 of Sakishi Watanabe, recounted a new version of events surrounding the death.
Sakurada's fate will be left in the hands of the jury this afternoon. The trial has occupied four days, necessitating the locking up on three nights of the jury of twelve men under police guard.
Briefly Sakurada testified that Tadao Hitomi killed Watanabe, and the accused denied all complicity in the death.
Under examination of his counsel, C. G. Beeson, the accused stated he had known Watanabe since October, 1929. They came from the same province in Japan. In July, 1930, Watanabe came to Sakurada's house on East Cordova Street. Watanabe was receiving $50 a month from the Workmen's Compensation Board.
Watanabe, according to Sakurada, left the house between 8 and 9 o'clock on the evening of March 29, saying that he was going to take a bath. The accused followed him and found he went to Powell Street, where Hitomi lived, and that Hitomi joined him outside his house, and the two men walked toward the railway tracks. There Hitomi had killed Watanabe, accused declared.

Communist Wants To Be Regina Mayor

Regina, Oct. 9.—For the first time in its history Regina will have a Communist candidate for mayor. Herbert Court is the man, and he is running with the official sanction of the Regina branch of the Communist Party.
The present mayor, James Balfour, K.C., has announced his intention of again seeking election, while other candidates are Col. James McEars, for four years mayor of Regina; Bruce McIntosh, present alderman, and Dr. L. Roy, former alderman. The civic election will be held November 23.

LAKE COWICHAN

Lake Cowichan, Oct. 9.—A largely attended harvest festival service was held by the United Church in the schoolhouse. For the occasion, the ladies of the community had decorated the building with flowers and fruit.
During the service, Mrs. Sam Alexander sang the hymn "My Task."
J. Le Breton addressed the gathering.
Members of the ladies' bridge club met Tuesday at the home of Mrs. E.
Lomas, for the first bridge game of a series to be played during the winter.
After refreshments had been served,
the prize was presented to Mrs. G.
Kenneth Gillespie.
W. McIntyre of the Industrial Timber Mills Limited, Youbou, has returned after several days spent in Vancouver.

SKELETONS FOUND

Darlington, Man., Oct. 9.—Workmen excavating a basement for the community hall here yesterday unearthed a human skeleton, six skulls and a quantity of bones believed to be remains of Indians who roamed the Manitoba plains 300 years ago. It is thought the place where they were found was either a regular place of burial or the spot at which warring tribes met in combat.

Canada supplies about one-third of the world's annual wheat requirements.

INDIANS WALK TO GOLD FIELD IN ALBERTA

Canadian Press
Calgary, Oct. 9.—Their claims duly registered, a group of Indians, accompanied by Harry Ford and Jack Hunter, coal operators, to-day were plodding the thirty miles from the end of the auto road into the muskeg and timber country of Big Timber Creek, where they hope to find gold.
A greater rush is expected to develop shortly by M. Gossip, provincial lands agent here, but the prospectors must first go into the area, stake their claims and then register them, so it will be the beginning of next week before any heavy registration is likely.
Early reports that the analysts at the Institute of Technology and Art had assayed the ore were denied by the Institute. Traces of gold have been found in some of the ore, but no proof of "pure gold" nuggets has been forthcoming.

New St. Lawrence Canals Declared Not Yet Needed

Canadian Press
Montreal, Oct. 9.—Although favoring the ultimate canalization of the St. Lawrence River as a work of great importance and as an aid to commerce between all sections of Canada,
Col. W. T. Gear of Montreal yesterday expressed the opinion the project should only be proceeded with when it was actually required, and then only if Canada could afford the expenditure.
Col. Gear is a former president of the Shipping Federation of Canada and war-time controller of shipping in Montreal.
"In the meantime," he said, "I am not convinced it is necessary. The present canals are far from being used to their capacity, and are capable of handling a much greater tonnage, the only immediate drawback being the depth of water on the silts of the locks."

Alleged Killer Asks Government Pay For Appeal

Denver, Colo., Oct. 9.—Major Charles
A. Sheppard, United States army surgeon formerly of Belleville, Ont., convicted of the poison murder of his wife, pleaded insanity and asked the Federal Circuit judges here have granted his request that the government pay the expenses of his appeal from the decision.

The sixty-year-old officer was convicted December 23, 1930, of fatally poisoning Mrs. Zenana Sheppard in June, 1920, at Fort Riley, Kas. It was alleged by the government he killed his wife in order to be free to marry Miss Grace Brandon, twenty-four-year-old San Antonio stenographer.

ADVICE TO SHERIFFS

Toronto, Oct. 9.—"People are straining to make ends meet and if they are given ample time they will discharge their obligations to the full," said Hon.
W. H. Price, Attorney-General of Ontario, in asking bailiffs and sheriffs to exercise care in foreclosing on property. People who loaned money on securities and bonds should not be too anxious to take action to collect, he said.

CAHAN MAKES STATEMENT ON DUMP DUTY

Minister Says Goods From Britain Cost Canadians Same As Formerly

Canadian Press
Ottawa, Oct. 9.—Hon. C. H. Cahan, Secretary of State and Acting Minister of National Revenue, when asked for an explanation of the order-in-council dealing with the depreciation of the British pound which were recently made on his official application, gave the press yesterday evening a statement which said in part:
"There has been considerable discussion in the press as to the propriety or expediency of the government's action in imposing a dumpage duty on goods of a class or kind made or produced in Canada, which are imported into Canada from Great Britain, in view of the depreciation in the actual value of the pound sterling as a standard for international exchange.
"For the purpose of levying customs duty the Dominion Government has fixed the exchange rate of the pound sterling at par, that is at the fixed value of $4.86 2-3 in Canadian dollars.
This ruling involves no change or policy on the part of successive governments, and it has been generally accepted with approval throughout Canada.
"The depreciation or reduction in the actual value of the pound sterling
in Great Britain and on the international exchanges abroad has enabled British manufacturers to reduce their costs of production, and to insure that British-made goods may compete more successfully in the domestic markets of Canada and other countries with the similar products of those countries.
"These results were accomplished by means of a reduction in the actual value of the British pound sterling and
of all British negotiable securities,
wherever and by whomsoever held
throughout the world.
"This depreciation or reduction in the actual value of the pound sterling
in Great Britain and on the international exchanges abroad has enabled British manufacturers to reduce their costs of production, and to insure that British-made goods may compete more
successfully in the domestic markets of Canada and other countries with the similar products of those countries.
"These results were accomplished by means of a reduction in the actual value of the British pound sterling and
of all British negotiable securities,
wherever and by whomsoever held
throughout the world.
"When tariff changes were made by the Canadian Parliament in September, 1920, and June, 1931, the British preferential rates were based on the pound sterling at $4.86 2-3 in Canadian currency. If customs duties had continued to be imposed in Canada since September 20 last on the basis of a depreciated pound sterling, that is, a pound of less value than $4.86 2-3 in Canadian currency, it would inevitably have resulted in a considerable reduction in the total amount of customs duty receivable by the Canadian treasury resulting from the fact that the actual value of the pound sterling at the time when the more recent tariff changes were submitted to and passed by Parliament.
"If this provision were not now made by the Dominion Government against the prejudicial effects of such arbitrary action on the part of the government of a country from which Canada's imports are so largely purchased, the Canadian Government, in a time of stress and strain, would have been compelled to borrow larger amounts to provide for the increasing deficiencies in its customs revenues.
"AT SAME LEVEL
"Prior to the September 21, 1931, in ordering goods from Great Britain of a class or kind made or produced in Canada, the Canadian importer expected to pay for them on the basis of $4.86 2-3 to the pound sterling. Under the recent ruling, a Canadian importer does not pay one cent more for his goods than he would have paid had there been no depreciation in the pound sterling.
"Our advice is that, in the near future, prices are not likely to rise rapidly, if at all, in Great Britain.
Most of the raw products imported into Great Britain by British manufacturers are purchased in countries whose currencies are now depreciated.
Raw cotton, for instance, is not wholly bought by Great Britain in the United States; but I am reliably informed reduced costs of ocean freight and insurance, now payable in sterling, and reduced cost of railway transportation in England, will enable the British manufacturer of textiles to land at his factory in England his imports of raw cotton from the United States at practically the same actual total cost as that now paid by the Canadian manufacturers of cotton goods.
"If no remedial action had been taken by the Canadian government, I am convinced that, before the end of the present month, thousands of Canadian workmen and workwomen would have been thrown out of employment in order that employment in English factories might be correspondingly increased.
"On the other hand, the preference accorded to British goods imported directly through Canadian ports is not interfered with, but operates now in favor of British products as it did before the collapse of the pound sterling.
"Moreover, the premium now paid in Canadian currency for New York funds, and the appropriate action which has been taken in respect thereof, gives British products in the Canadian market a preference over United States products which the British manufacturer has never hitherto enjoyed in this country.
"DOLLAR AT NEW YORK
"Among other regulations which the government's action has already achieved are the following:
"1. The customs revenue of Canada, as derived from customs duties levied on imported British goods, has been stabilized.
"2. The excess of Canada's imports over exports will be reduced; and, in consequence, Canada's shipments of gold to the United States will be more easily held in check and Canadian currency held nearer to par in New York funds.
"3. The price in Canadian currency of every unit of British goods imported into Canada will be maintained at practically the same price in Canadian currency as that which prevailed prior to September 30 last.
"4. Importers of British goods of a kind and description made or produced in Canada may no longer speculate for profits in the rise and fall of the pound sterling.
"5. Thousands of Canadian employees, who would otherwise have suffered from enforced idleness and destitution, will continue to be employed in Canada at their usual vocations and to maintain a fair standard of living in their Canadian homes."

IN MANCHURIA

FROM THE SITUATION IN MANchuria two facts have emerged. First, there has been an intensification to the extent of full war operations of the long-standing conflict of interests between Japan and China. Second, the war party in the Japanese cabinet has again assumed a temporary dominance over the peace party.

Manchuria has furnished one of the major problems of Pacific affairs. Its area is four times as large as Great Britain, and has a population of only 25,000,000. Its soil is exceptionally productive and its mineral resources extensive. Japanese Korea lies alongside, and Japan, with its over-crowded population, has naturally looked toward Manchuria. Besides one million Japanese subjects and capital investments of one billion dollars in Manchuria, Japan, since the Russo-Japanese War, has had possession of the South Manchurian Railway, a line of 700 miles. To guard this railway Japan maintains a force of troops there. But Manchuria is politically a part of China, and its population yearly becomes increasingly Chinese through immigration from the over-crowded valleys of southern China. To the Chinese it is the one area left for expansion.

Under such circumstances an open clash has always been imminent between the two racial forces. The Japanese railway troops have been the spearhead for Japanese penetration, and have supplied the focal point for the present outbreak. They justify their military operations on the grounds of necessity to resist Chinese attempts to destroy the line. Yesterday's news reports would seem to confirm the general belief that railway protection has provided merely the excuse for operations, as Japanese bombers extended their activities over Chinchow, which is 100 miles from the nearest point on the Manchurian railroad. For Japan there is the opportunity to consolidate her hold on the country. But the Chinese are no longer submissive.

The clash has brought to light the division of opinion in the Japanese cabinet itself. In its number there have been two factions, a peace party led by the Finance Minister and the Foreign Minister, and a war party led by the representatives of the fighting services. When the Manchurian affair was discussed by the Council of the League of Nations recently, the Japanese representative said he had no instructions from his government. This reply was accepted as in good faith because of the known division in the cabinet. Decision of the government not to send reinforcements to Manchuria was then first announced. But the War Minister declared that this had already been done. "The peace party seems to have the better of the talk," as The Manchester Guardian has put it, "but the war party has the better of the action."

Since the Great War Japanese politics has seen a marked growth in the democratic movement. With this has come an increase in the power and influence of the civil authority, as against a militarism, formerly all-supreme. The civilian party recognizes that Japan can prosper only with Chinese goodwill and points to what it calls the fiasco of the Japanese invasion of Shantung three years ago. It fears the loss of Chinese trade, without which Japanese industrialism would be paralyzed.

The military party had been calling for "a strong hand" in Manchuria, with an intensive campaign of propaganda for punitive measures against China carried on during the summer. While the attention of the world powers was focussed on the economic disturbance in connection with the suspension of the gold standard in Britain last month, the Japanese militarists stole a march on the civil authority—as militarists have in other countries—and forced an issue over the protection of the Manchurian railroad.

To-day, with part of the Japanese fleet on the move towards Shanghai, and anti-Japanese agitation among the Chinese reported as assuming "alarming proportions," the conflict, bursting beyond the confines of Manchuria, threatens the world with a major war movement in the Far East. The situation confronts the League of Nations with the most severe testing yet of the efficacy of its powers.

TOO BIG A LOAD

WHEN PREMIER BENNETT FORMED his government last year he took upon his own shoulders the ministry of finance in addition to all his other responsibilities. The country was informed that such an arrangement was only temporary—until one of the capable men the Premier had in view could be brought into the government to take over the office.

After the emergency session of Parliament last autumn, it was expected the Premier would lighten his load. But, instead, his move was to centre more closely in his own personal control the details of administration generally. His followers began to admit the accuracy of the "one-man-government" criticism.

Through the long regular session of the Commons this year, Mr. Bennett, unyielding in his grip on the ministry of finance, personally assumed the enormous added responsibility for the details of the tariff changes. The result was that many of the changes brought into the House obviously were insufficiently considered, involving their withdrawal for reconstruction.

There was grumbling on the government side. But Mr. Bennett not only held on; he went still further. In the crowded closing days of the session, he put through the bill "to provide employment, farm relief and preserve peace, order and good government." This, with the accompanying orders-in-council, virtually conferred upon him dictatorial power in the governing of Canada.

Two weeks ago the gold standard question arose.

Mr. Bennett in his all-embracing capacity at once tossed out his announcement that no matter what Britain did, Canada was on a gold basis and was going to stay on it. However, the Canadian dollar failed to heed this command as from the gods. It soon fell to a discount of fifteen per cent.

This has raised again in a pointed way the question of the Premier's position and the over-centralization of power. Some of the Premier's financial friends have now become outspoken about it. The Financial Post, in a front page editorial this week, takes it up, saying:

Events of the past ten days emphasize how seriously wrong the Prime Minister was when he announced—on the eve of Britain's suspension of gold payments—that Canada was on a gold basis and intended to stay there—and when he thus, by inference, undertook to restore the Canadian dollar, then at a discount of two or three per cent, to par again within a few days.

Again, in that incident, was emphasized the fact that Mr. Bennett is carrying a load beyond the ability of any man living to carry without more assistance and advice than the Prime Minister is ever willing to accept.

Mr. Bennett needs at once the firm guiding and friendly co-operation of an able Minister of Finance. Such a minister would not have rushed into print with a promise of the maintenance of the gold standard before studying the implication of Britain's action.

Omniscience is not given to man, not even to a Mussolini.

THAWING OUT

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S "RECOVERY" plan, centering around an attempt to restore confidence by providing a national banking pool fund of $500,000,000, with which to "melt" credits frozen during the long depression, evokes the interest and commendation of Canadians on two grounds.

First, is the fact that economists are all agreed prosperity can not advance far in the rest of the world, including Canada, until the United States recovers. An increase in the volume of credit at the present time, as the plan proposes, would undoubtedly provide at least a temporary stimulus to business and a check to falling prices, possibly creating momentum enough to carry over any succeeding slump. Second, is the direct result to Canada in the restoration to par of the Canadian dollar, expected to follow liquidation of frozen United States credits, and the move back toward normal trade.

The importance of the restoration of the exchange value of the Canadian dollar has to do not so much with Canadian purchases of goods in the United States, as with the payments by our various governments, municipalities and industrial companies of interest and principal on bonds due at the gold rate in New York. It is indicated that there will be no difficulty so soon as the domestic United States situation is cleared in gold credits being furnished in New York to cover such Canadian payments. This would naturally be good business on the part of the United States, anxious to preserve its foreign banking contacts, and it would prove a big saving to the Canadian taxpayer and many business enterprises.

The negotiations linked up with the Hoover plan to extend the war debts moratorium, which have provoked controversy at Washington, are really of little significance. The political play on the war debts is mostly for home consumption. The war debts question will be settled, when the final settlement time comes, not by what the politicians say to please their voters at home, but by the stern facts of international economics.

A CHAPTER OF LAMENTATION

AN EASTERN NEWSPAPER PRINTS the following quotation and asks its readers to make a guess as to the period it describes:

It is a gloomy moment in history. Not for many years—not in the lifetime of most men who read this paper—has there been so much grave and deep apprehension. In our own country there is universal commercial prostration and panic and thousands of our poorest fellow-citizens are turned out against the approaching winter without employment.

In France the political cauldron seethes and bubbles with uncertainty. Russia hangs as usual like a cloud dark and silent upon the horizon of Europe; while all the energies, resources and influences of the British Empire are sorely tried, and are yet to be tried more sorely, in coping with the vast and deadly Indian insurrection, and with disturbed relations in China.

Of our own troubles no man can see the end. If we are only to lose money and by painful poverty to be taught wisdom, no man need seriously despair. Yet the very haste to be rich, which is the occasion of this widespread calamity, has also tended to destroy the moral forces with which we are to resist and subdue the calamity.

However accurately it may fit the view some persons take of present conditions, those who might feel like dating it 1930 or 1931, would be wrong. It is an editorial article from Harper's Weekly of October 10, 1857.

Read with the date in mind, its despondency turns to encouragement and comfort. The sufferings of the days it describes were more intense and the note more hopeless than anything to-day, yet, from that lower level there shortly afterward developed a spirited recovery and the depths were soon forgotten.

And, if there is anything at all in history, at the end of another seventy-four years our grandchildren will be quoting from the files to-day's lamentations and contrasting them with the revival they preceded.

WHAT OTHER PAPERS SAY

GASOLINE AND LIQUOR
The Glace Bay Gazette

Motor cars and liquor and reckless youth make a bad combination. It is a combination which is making the country roads dangerous and which in some parts of Cape Breton constitutes a new problem for the police authorities. Repeated acts of lawlessness this summer make it evident that the problem will have to be dealt with.

THE RUSSIAN EXPERIMENT

J. A. Spender in The London News-Chronicle

It is not the abolition of private property, but the abolition of the private life which is so repulsive in these experiments. To be herded together, as the Russians seem to be, and to be at the mercy of propagandists who see in you nothing but raw material for the current Five-Year Plan—this is what repels a man brought up in the ordinary human way. If I had to choose between masters, I personally would any day choose the hardest-faced man of business in preference to these zealous and disinterested apostles of the Marxian faith.

Loose Ends

Some more deep stuff from shallow minds—concerning civilization—and pigs and bacon—and cabbages.

By H. B. W.

AT THIS TIME, when we need sanity more than ever, it seems to me that more loose and silly talk is going about in high places than usual. It is a general, indeed, that I am often inclined to suspect even this column. One of the chief fallacies nourished in the breast of statescraft these days, spouted from the platform and hurled at you whenever you are not looking, is the fallacy that land settlement will cure our troubles. It is pathetic to see how our statesmen, particularly the provincial ones, cling to this idea, to hear them talk about the aesthetic joy of keeping a pig and a cow and almost water at the mouth as they tell the unemployed how they should pickle cabbages and a side of bacon for the winter. But I have a dark suspicion about all this. I suspect—that pigs, cabbages and bacon are being hurried at us from the platform of statescraft, these days because statesmen have not any other idea to offer.

NOW, MIND YOU, if this back-to-the-land notion were advanced on what you might call a spiritual basis I would be all for it. I am all for it, have gone back to the land myself while statesmen, who never lifted a hoe, have been urging others to do so. I have become a peasant and a rather able one, too. You should see my winter cabbages and home-canned tomatoes. I know all about the pleasure of going back to the land, of being independent and close to the soil. I know more about it than most of our statesmen; and that is the more remarkable since I went back to the land by choice. I did not have to; whereas our statesmen, who boast of their early training on the land, stayed on the land then because they had to, and stay off it now that they have the chance to enjoy something more comfortable.

THIS BACK-TO-THE-LAND movement, I say, would be a good thing if it were on a spiritual basis, if human society were going to simplify itself and live as nature intended. But statesmen do not preach it on any such ground. They have no intention of making society simply more natural, closer to the eternal verities. Not they. They are preaching back-to-the-land purely on a material basis, because they believe it will improve business. If they imagined for a moment that a return to the land would ultimately abolish the luxuries of our cities, the bodily comforts of civilization and the rewards of politics then they would not preach this noble doctrine. It is from the cold-blooded business standpoint, therefore, that their scheme must be examined.

IN THE FIRST PLACE, I am not against a general return to the land even from a material standpoint. It would not bother me if everybody lived like a peasant and all cities disappeared. I would like it. It would save me writing stuff like this. I would not discourage the unemployed millions of the world from going back to the land, but I would urge them to do so. But I would urge them with my eyes open, knowing what the result would be. And what would the final result be? The final result would be the collapse of our particular form of civilization altogether. Which would suit me, but not most people.

THIS IS OBVIOUS if you care to look ahead further than next Tuesday morning, which seems to be too far for practical politics. The facts are quite simple. The agricultural industry of the world, particularly of America, is virtually bankrupt. It is carrying on in Canada and the United States only through enormous contributions from the public purse, through wheat bonuses and direct relief in the form of the purchase of its surplus products at artificial prices by the Federal Farm Board in the United States. It is producing more than the world is consuming. The result of the poverty of the farmers is a tremendous drop in purchasing power for almost everything that the cities manufacture. The farmers have not the money to buy things as they were buying them a few years ago, because there are too many farmers. Where every farmer roughly used to support seven or eight industrial workers in the city now millions of these industrial workers are out of work, not entirely on account of agricultural depression, of course, but that is probably the biggest factor. Now, then, if we start a general back-to-the-land movement there will be a still greater surplus of farmers and farmers' products. Each farmer will be still poorer. Each will buy less. The market for our cities continue to decrease and unemployment increase. And so you go round in a vicious circle.

BUT THE ADVOCATES of unlimited agriculture, reply that they do not propose that people shall go back to the land to make money with which to buy city products. They propose only that people go back to the land to make a bare living for themselves, to produce what they need instead of depending on the state. This sounds attractive, but follow that process beyond next Tuesday and see where it lands you. Our industrial organization was built up on the purchasing power of the entire population. If a large part of it goes back to the land and keeps itself by its own efforts, buys practically nothing but the bare necessities, then our industrial organization will not be able to survive on its present scale. It will have to slow down, restrict its output, reduce its workers who, under this remarkable scheme, will also go back to the land and stop buying things. And so on, around and around.

THERE IS NO end to this process. Or, rather, the end will simply be the decay of our machine civilization, who does not. The fellows who preach agriculture do not expect anything of the sort. They imagine that everybody else will go back to the land, drain the cities of unemployed and leave them prosperous. But that cannot happen. They, too, will be caught in the vicious circle after a while and will have to go back to the land, to the pigs, the pickled bacon and the cabbages with the rest of us. Poor fellows.

NOTHING OF THE SORT. I regret to say, is going to happen. We are not going back to the land. That is, not in a big way, not permanently. Before the back-to-the-land movement has got well under way, business will have found its feet, industry will have speeded up and more and more men will have to be taken from the land to run the factories, to produce the goods which everyone wants. Less and less men, with improved methods, will be needed to produce food. The simple fact is that the world is embarked on a gigantic experiment in industrialization, in mechanization, and is going ahead with it. So far as I can see, mankind has no intention of abandoning his machines, and if he retains his machines he will have to retain a machine civilization in which everybody buys the products of the machine. By heroic efforts he will see that these products are bought somehow. Some day, a thousand years or so from now, the whole arrangement may collapse when we grow tired of it, but I see no prospect of that occurring before next Tuesday. All our lifetime, I fear, we are fated to follow the machine rather than the pigs, the pickled bacon and the cabbages. And when I think of the particularly fine cabbages in my garden I am very sorry for the rest of you.

Other People's Views

THE SINGLE MEN'S DEMAND

To the Editor:—In reference to the recent unemployed demands, considerable criticism has been leveled at the men elected to place the case of the unemployed single men before the mayor. As has already been made clear, not one of the delegation was acting without authority. A meeting of every gang of single men was called and a delegation of four was elected to interview the mayor and place the demand of $2 instead of $1.40 per day. This was the definite demand they were instructed to ask for. Nothing was done without the men first being consulted, and any reports that intimidation were used, are absolutely false. The foremen can verify this. Regarding the two demonstrations

FINE CHOIRS AT LEEDS FESTIVAL

Sir Thos. Beecham Conductor at Yorkshire Gathering

London, Oct. 9.—The Yorkshireman's boast that his country produces the finest choral singers appears to be once again justified in the achievements at the Leeds triennial musical festival being held this week. This festival, although having a history of more than seventy years, is a juvenile compared with those of Norwich and the West Country three-choirs festival.

Nevertheless, some works recognized to-day as classics were first heard in England at Leeds. This year's festival opened with a masterly performance of Handel's "Solomon," followed by Cherubini's "Mass" in D Minor. Critics were exceedingly complimentary to Sir Thomas Beecham, festival conductor.

Later in the week three new English compositions will be presented, namely, "Belshazzar's Feast," by William Walton; "The Seasons," by Eric Fogg; and an oratorio work by Frederick Austin.

Your Baby and Mine

BY MYRTLE NEYER ELDRED

A mother is ambitious for her child from the day of birth. Try as she will to conceal it, her pride expands or her pride shrivels according to the manner in which her offspring exceeds or falls below her expectations.

This would be fine if the mother knew what she should rightfully expect of the child. She seldom does. She is constantly anticipating his development. She is eager for him to sit up. She wants him to walk early. She hangs on his babble sounds, reading into them meanings quite beyond the child's capacities for speech.

She compares him with other babies, unaware that even a few months make a vast difference in what a child can and cannot do. If he cannot sit-up-when the child of some neighbor manages this infant ceremony, she is disappointed. She wonders, down in the depths of her heart, if she is as smart as he should be (considering his parentage, of course).

FULL STEAM AHEAD

Once he is started upon the second year, her ambitions pass all bounds. He must be trained, of course. If he is not, woe is he. She knows he understands what is expected of him, and she uses every conceivable punishment to convince him that he must "tell her." She does not bother to discover whether the child is old enough to be capable of anticipating his sensations. She considers his failures along these lines as an insult to her efforts.

As soon as he can talk intelligently, she begins to teach him his letters, and rejoices at his progress when he can count to ten and reel off his alphabet.

AUTHORS HEAR FINE ADDRESS ON WM. KIRBY

"William Kirby and The Golden Dog," was the theme of a delightful address given by Miss L. F. M. Clement yesterday evening before the members of the Victoria and Island Branch Canadian Authors' Association at the October meeting held in the Arts and Crafts Rooms, Yates and Langley Streets.

Miss Clement, while engaged in library work at Niagara was associated for years with William Kirby, president emeritus of the Niagara Public Library, and also an intimate friend of her father and grandfather.

The poetry of Kirby was also dealt with by the speaker. Miss Clement was congratulated upon her interesting discourse and thanked for the entertainment it afforded. Miss Perry, Mrs. J. R. Angus, Mr. A. H. Sutherland and Donald A. Fraser spoke in the discussion which followed. Mr. Fraser read two poems from the collected verse of Miss Whitman of the Public Library, Nanaimo, a member of the Victoria and Islands Branch, "Fairy Land" and "Indian Paint Brush," being very fine examples of the lyric quality of her work. An autographed letter from Mado de La Roche was brought to the interested audience by Mrs. Luelia M. Hughes.

Members were reminded of the opportunity to have their plays presented by the B.C. Dramatic School, and were asked to have all plays submitted by November 15. Mr. Fraser spoke of the successful presentation of plays which took place last season. General regret was expressed at the absence of Mrs. C. D'A. Henderson from the meeting and sympathy in the loss which occasioned it. A letter of sympathy to Mrs. M. S. Wheatley in her bereavement was also voted to be sent. Mr. A. H. Sutherland invited the Short Story Group to hold the next meeting at his home, Dewdney Avenue, Uplands. Mrs. Ebb-Cavanah was in the chair.

THE SPORTS MIRROR

"Wild Bill" Hallahan's Case
One of Saddest in Baseball History

Turns Back Athletics for Second Time But Gets Little Recognition

Howard Ehmke's Great Pitching Feat in Last Series Is Recalled

Veteran Hurler Gave One of Greatest Performances in Series History

ONE of the strangest features of the current world baseball series was the case on Wednesday of "Wild Bill" Hallahan, the player who failed to pick his spots. He had just finished pitching his second game of the world series and had turned back the Philadelphia Athletics for the second time. Twice he had beaten one of the most poisonous clubs in baseball, allowing them one run in eighteen consecutive innings. The sad-faced portly, in two superb exhibitions, had placed the Cardinals on the threshold of a world championship.

And what did the erstwhile "Wild Bill" hear from 30,000 throats. What was the sympathy that beat in his ears as he walked from the mound Wednesday after throttling the A's for the second time? "What did he hear?" "Pepper" Martin. It was a situation probably without parallel in baseball history. A squat, unheralded rookie outfielder, had so captured the imagination of the multitude by the sheer brilliance of his play that they virtually overlooked Hallahan's brilliant hurling. Last year—almost any year—Hallahan's name would have been on an assorted million tongues. But not while this Martin marvel is around.

It is hard to realize just what Martin has done to a first class ball club. He has, according to press dispatches, demoralized what baseball men regard as one of the most powerful teams of modern times. He has transformed the Cardinals from a good ball team into a rip-tearing, fighting outfit that will be hard to stop short of a world title.

Heroic ghosts of other days reappear at world series time. They gather around the ball parks where the current series is being fought out and in hotel lobbies to talk over the bright past. Such a spectre is Howard Ehmke. The world series has known some smart pitching, but seldom has the feat of Ehmke been equaled for pure sagacity. Shortly before the baseball season of 1929 ended, Connie Mack left Ehmke in Philadelphia to study the Chicago Cubs during a series with the Phils. Ehmke armed himself with a fat notebook, took a seat back of home plate and wrote what he saw.

He saw most of the Cub batters hitting into the right field, outside balls. Their preference was for fast ones.

Ehmke had three deliveries—overhand, sidearm, underhand. He decided he would use the underhand delivery. In the pinches upon delivering the ball he would step sharply to the right. This made the ball come up to the plate out of the background of his blue-grey uniform. It was to see. Using that trick delivery for putting over the third strike, Ehmke fanned thirteen in the first game of the series of 1929, winning 3 to 1.

One of the ghosts of that game came in the third inning. There were runners on second and third, one was out and Hornsby and Wilson coming up. Ehmke curved over a strike. The next one he shot high and inside for strike two. Hornsby, who had stood calmly watching the first two go past, now set himself. Ehmke probably would try another of those curves over the outside corner. That was good baseball logic. Hornsby tightened, and was ready.

And Ehmke sent him along another one high and inside. It caught the Rajah off balance. Strike three!

Now for Wilson. A high one inside and a curve went for two strikes. The next ball was "out of the uniform" and Hack hardly saw the thing until it wafted past him. He swung, but the ball was not there.

So it went on, inning after inning with Ehmke throwing a ball that looked easy to hit—if you were looking at it from the stands. Time after time, the umpires examined the ball, suspecting it had been tampered with.

In the ninth another tough spot came when the Cubs had runners on first and third with two out. Tolson was pinch-hitting, and Ehmke knew nothing about him, never having seen him play.

He mixed them up. First he curved over a strike. Then he wasted a ball. Another ball. Then a strike. With two and two, he tried to slip one across the outside, but the umpire called it a ball. Three and two.

He called Cochran out to the box. They held a short conference. Cochran returned to his post and as he passed Tolson he remarked: "Gee, I can't understand that guy; his control is good, that's one thing sure."

Ehmke drew back to pitch. As the ball came down into the groove, Cochran yelled sharply, "Hit it!"

If Cochran had grabbed Tolson's bat, it would not have been more effective. The amazed batter started to swing, changed his mind, then started to swing again.

And it was all over but the shouting.

Schools Send In Strong Entries For Trial Meet

Between 200 and 300 Will Thrash Way Through Waters at Crystal Garden in Quest of District Championships; Diving Should Be of Higher Standard This Year; Several Former Winners Will Attempt to Retain Honors

Between 200 and 300 youngsters, keyed up to the highest pitch, will thrash their way through the water at the Crystal Garden to-morrow evening in the elimination trials and district championships in the annual school children's gala, staged under the auspices of the Victoria Amateur Swimming Club. In virtually every event several entries have been received and keen competitions are expected as the youngsters strive for the right to represent their schools and municipalities in the finals a week from to-morrow.

Famous Grandstand At Lexington Is Destroyed By Fire

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 9.—The grandstand from which cheering thousands watched Peter Manning set the world mile trotting record of 1:56 1/5 in 1925 was a mass of charred wood and twisted steel following a fire which destroyed the structure at the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association track early to-day.

The blaze, its origin unascertained, started in the betting sheds and swept through the building before firemen could arrive. The grandstand was built in 1893. It overlooked an oval known as the fastest mile track in Canada or the United States.

Less than two hours after the blaze was discovered, the fire had burned out. Track officials estimated the loss at $125,000. Insurance to the amount of $50,000 was carried.

KENNEL CLUB WILL STAGE THREE SHOWS

First of Winter Series Will Take Place Oct. 24; President Niven Resigns

Judging of Various Breeds Following Regular Meetings Will Be New Feature

At the last monthly meeting of the Victoria City Kennel Club, held recently, the president, Major H. W. Niven, expressed his keen regret at having to relinquish the office which he has held for the last four years. He expressed his thanks to the officers and members of the club for the support given and for working so harmoniously with him during his term of office.

This announcement was received with sincere regret by the members, as Major Niven has been a great worker for the club. He will be missed not only by the club but by the whole of the Victoria dog world. His resignation was caused through his transfer to duties at Fort Garry, Winnipeg.

Several other matters affecting the club's activities were discussed, including the winter parlor shows. It was arranged that three be held during the winter, the first to take place on October 24.

Gene Sarazen Wins Memorial Golf For Two Years in Row

Salisbury Plains, N.Y., Oct. 9.—Splashing through a heavy rain in close to par figures, Gene Sarazen, Lakewood Country Club, Great Neck, N.Y., yesterday scored his second consecutive victory in the $5,000 J. J. Lannin Memorial open golf tournament.

Gene negotiated the number 4 course of the Salisbury Country Club in 72 on his last round to-day to finish with a seventy-two hole total of 284, two strokes ahead of "Light Horse" Harry Cooper, Chicago. Sarazen's four rounds were 69-70-74-71-284.

MacDonald Smith, Great Neck, took third place with a 290 total.

All elimination competitions have been divided into district contests. The winners of the races will be given championship ribbons next week for their sections. Along with second-place finishers, they will attempt to uphold the laurels of their different schools against speedsters of the lower island.

Entries have not yet been received from Brewood College or Esquimalt, but these schools are expected to send in the names of their stars before the deciding gala.

GOOD DIVING EXPECTED
This year the diving competitions promise to be more interesting than usual. Both girls and boys will be required to do five or six dives. The boys will have a running plain, running jack and back dive as their compulsory. After that they will be called upon to do three other stunts, recognized in the diving tables. No dive may be repeated.

The Young Pools Bond, promising Victoria High School performer, should stand a good chance of taking first honors, but it is understood others will be in the fight to give him plenty of opposition.

In the senior girls' sprint, Lillian Stokes, one of Colin MacFadyen's leading Crystal Garden team winners, is expected to show up well.

STRONG TEAM
Strong teams will be competing for the University School which has been able to take a large number of first awards in former years.

However, in the Saanich district trials, their seniors will have just about all they can do to beat young Jack Rawlins, Saanich High entry.

Jean Metcalfe, Craigflower girl, who has repeatedly won in her division, is again expected to be among the leaders in the under sixteen class.

Scores of other promising youngsters will be in the fight to uphold the honor of their schools.

SEMI-FINAL MATCHES ARE HARD FOUGHT

Mrs. Sayward-Wilson and Mrs. Hutchinson in Final of Oak Bay Club Golf

Latter Defeats Mrs. Godfrey at Nineteenth After Great Match; Final To-day

With the city and Colwood titles already in her possession, Mrs. Sayward-Wilson was this afternoon battling with Mrs. Hutchinson in an effort to secure her third championship, that of the Victoria Golf Club. Mrs. Sayward-Wilson had a great fight with Mrs. Parry, local veteran, in yesterday's semi-final and won on the seventeenth, 3 and 1, after her opponent's faulty putting had lessened her chances for victory.

The finest match of the championship to date was seen in the semi-final between Mrs. Hutchinson and Mrs. Godfrey. After Mrs. Godfrey, who has been playing really fine golf this week, rounded the turn 1 up, she proceeded to win two of the next three holes and gain a lead of 3 up and 6 to play. Mrs. Hutchinson settled down to the business of winning, took the thirteenth, halved the fourteenth, won the fifteenth and sixteenth to square the match, halved the seventeenth and missed a short putt on the last green to force the match into extra holes. She made no mistake on the first extra hole and the match was over.

ONE UP AT TURN
In the Mrs. Sayward-Wilson-Mrs. Parry match, the winner was 1 up at the turn. She did the nine holes in 41 to her opponent's 42. Though Mrs. Parry made a match of it every hole, Mrs. Sayward-Wilson gradually increased her lead and at the seventeenth she was 3 up.

Mrs. H. A. Ross, medalist, and Mrs. H. F. Hepburn are contesting the "B" class championship. The former defeated Mrs. Harold Wilson, 3 and 2, in what was the closest match she has had so far, and the latter accounted for Miss Nora Wilson, 5 and 3.

"A" CLASS Championship
Mrs. Sayward-Wilson defeated Mrs. Walter Parry, 3 and 1.
Mrs. J. Hutchinson defeated Mrs. Godfrey at the nineteenth.

First Flight
Mrs. Charles E. Wilson defeated Miss Fitzgibbon, 4 and 2.
Miss Audsden defeated Mrs. Watson, 6 and 5.

"B" CLASS Championship
Mrs. H. A. Ross defeated Mrs. Harold Wilson, 3 and 2.
Mrs. H. F. Hepburn defeated Mrs. J. H. D. Benson, 1 up.

Second Flight
Miss D. Scott defeated Mrs. J. D. Hunter, 3 up.

Mrs. Macfarlane won the Class "A" monthly medal round played at Colwood Golf Club yesterday with 104, 14, 90. Two were tied for first place in Class "B." Mrs. Lee with 112, 27, 85, and Mrs. Leming with 108, 23, 85.

CITY GRIDMEN FACE BIG TEST IN MATCH AT PARK TO-MORROW

Whether or not Victoria's chances of winning the Big Four Canadian rugby pennant this year will be bright or will die an early death will be decided at the Royal Athletic Park to-morrow, critics agree. In the enclosure the Caps, who took a new lease on life when their protest against New Westminster was upheld and they gained a replay, will be meeting Norm Burley's undefeated Vancouver Athletic Club team, at present the strongest threats for first honors. The game will start at 2:30 o'clock.

If the locals can turn back the unbeaten Vacs they are conceded a good chance of walking right through to the finals. This opinion is strengthened by the statement of Coach Doug Roberts that Victoria's entry is a slow-starting team that should develop into a better squad as it goes along.

Little anxiety is felt here over the activities of Vancouver's triple-threat man, "Coke" Shields. He has played here before and has always been held down by the Victorians. They aim to see he is bottled up again to-morrow.

The tentative line-up for the Caps follows: Snap, Sandy Smith; right inside, Cox; left inside, Bob Eggleston; right outside wing, Joe McArthur; left middle wing, Ed de Blaquiere; right outside wing, Lynn Patrick; left outside wing, Campbell Forbes; flying wing, Bill Lennan; quarterback, "Rabbit" Jack Bellis; halfbacks, Jack Horne, Brian Hunsing and Murray Patrick; subs, Benny McMillan, Horace Good, Chris Usher, Tommy Hall, Harry Robson, George Warnock, Dan Dowell, Frank Gribble, Frank Skilling, Gordie Pettigrew, Geoffrey D'Arcy, Bruce Forbes and Harold Eggleston.

SAVAGE MEETS DEMETRAL HERE

Two Well-known Heavyweight Wrestlers in Main Event on Saturday's Card

Savage Proved Popular With Fans Last Week; Middleweights in Semi-windup

Steve Savage, smiling, good-natured heavyweight wrestler from Chicago, who made such a hit with Victoria fans in his first appearance here last Saturday, will be back this week-end, for an eight-round bout with Bill Demetral, New York. The pair are scheduled to go eight ten-minute rounds and this will be the main event of the card being presented at the Tillicum gymnasium. In the five-round semi-windup Wallace and Christensen, two middleweights, will battle.

Last Saturday Savage met Jack McCarthy, whom he defeated, two falls to one. The big fellow by his smile and good nature put himself in solid with the fans and they will no doubt welcome his return. Demetral appeared here a number of weeks ago in a five-round bout with "Rocky" Brooks, and gained a draw. Both weigh around 200 pounds.

The two semi-finalists are both newcomers here and nothing is known about their past records.

The first bout will commence at 8:45 o'clock.

Toronto, Oct. 9.—George Zaharias, Philadelphia, and Pat O'Schocker, Salt Lake City, put on one of the most exciting displays of wrestling ever witnessed in Toronto yesterday evening, when they battled through two hours of torrid grappling with each wrestler securing one fall.

Zaharias won the first fall in fifty-two minutes when he pinned O'Schocker's shoulders to the mat with a neck scissor. Coming back strong, O'Schocker began hurling Zaharias about the ring and evened matters after thirty-five minutes when he threw the Philadelphian with a body slam.

Tiger Daula Shows Some More Strength To Win Over Kaplan

Giant Indian Wrestler Takes Second Bout in Vancouver by Two Straight Falls in Four Rounds; 3,500 Fans Served Up With Fast Show; Daula Breaks Holds With Disdain; Jack McLaughlin Held to Draw by Toby Christenson

Vancouver, Oct. 9.—Tiger Daula, strong man from India, won another wrestling match yesterday evening. The Tiger took two falls in four rounds from the theatrical Abie Kaplan, New York, by the simple process of being just too strong. At other intervals he was just too smart.

Close on 3,500 wrestling fans crowded into the Arena to get a glimpse of this dusky-skinned pachyderm from far over the seas and were served up with a fast show, full of action.

Jack McLaughlin, Vancouver's own pride, had his hands more than filled by Toby Christenson, Boise, Idaho. Christenson was fast and strong, and quite elusive. He had Jack in some tough spots, which he managed to get by. But Jack could not get him in a tough position. They went three rounds without a fall for a draw.

Cassy O'Dale, San Francisco, and Jack McCarthy, Boston, back again after their draw last week, panicked the boys, to say nothing of the girls, in their five-round semi-windup. O'Dale clamped a Boston crab hold on McCarthy in the fourth round to take the odd fall.

Mahatma Gandhi may preach passive resistance, but Tiger Daula is one Indian who has not heard of it. He took nothing from Kaplan in the way of dirt without replying in kind, and he even put on a few dramatics of his own to match Kaplan's facial contortions and moans.

DAULA BREAKS HOLDS EASILY
Able was puzzled and not a little annoyed by the first round. Daula assumed the role of Hercules, flung him around the ring and broke his holds with disdainful gestures.

Came the second round. Abe tried to put on a headlock, but the tiger of the east picked him up, flung him to the mat then flopped on him for the first fall.

Abe put a few writhes and the odd headlock on in the third round. Daula solved the writhes by turning cartwheels, which broke the hold easily, and got out of the headlocks by mere snuggles of his shoulders.

The fourth round just went over the six-minute mark when Daula picked Kaplan up in a bear hug, flattened him out and showed his shoulders very flat into the resin.

O'Dale and McCarthy put on a wild and woolly battle. McCarthy is fast, surprising Bob Kruse's role as head winner of the wrestling ring. He was rough. He jerked at the crowd and made sneering gestures.

O'Dale, who has hair as stiff as steel, the start, looked nice and was the boy hero.

SPEED AND SKILL WIN FOR FIELDS

Former Welterweight Champ Pounds Out Ten-round Decision Over King Tut

Fields Rallies After Going Down in Second Round; Winnipeg Boy Scores K.O.

Detroit, Oct. 9.—Jackie Fields, Los Angeles, former welterweight champion, won a decision over King Tut, Milwaukee, in a ten-round bout here yesterday evening. Fields weighed 148, Tut 145 1/2.

Fighting in the same ring and in the same corner in which he lost his welterweight crown to young Jack Thompson, Fields reversed the situation of that night a year and a half ago.

Because of his victory yesterday evening he hopes to have another chance at Thompson in the near future.

Speed and boxing skill were Fields' big assets as time and again he beat King Tut to the punch.

FIELDS GOES DOWN
After a slow start in the first round, Tut sent Fields to one knee with a hard right in the second. This seemed to be just what the former champion needed to wake him up. He out-punched Tut for the remainder of the round and won the next two by a wide margin.

In the sixth round, Tut opened up a wide cut over Fields' left eye. The Milwaukee fighter took that round, but Fields came back strong in the eighth and ninth in the face of an onrushing attack.

Frankie Battaglia, 157, Winnipeg, knocked out Joe Ruggosanti, 158, Detroit, in the third round of a scheduled eight-round semi-final.

Jewel Ens Given His Release By Pittsburgh Club
Pittsburgh, Oct. 9.—Jewel Ens, manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates since late in the 1929 season, was given his unconditional release by the club yesterday. It was said a new manager would not be announced at this time.

Football teams from the Saanich and Esquimalt High Schools gave a good exhibition of soccer in a game played at the Finnelly Road Park on Wednesday afternoon. The final score was 4 to 3 in favor of the Esquimalt boys.

The men's club handicap club championship scheduled at the Colwood Golf Club on Sunday has been postponed until October 18, it was announced to-day.

All games will start at 8 o'clock.

Pepper Martin Cocky But Loved By Teammates

World Series Hero Rode Rods to Get Chance With Cards

Arrived at St. Louis Training Camp in 1928 Looking More Like a Hobo Than a Ballplayer; Bill McKeechie, Then Manager of Cards, Gave Youngster Run Around in Effort to Tame Him; Is Cocky But in No Way Offensive; Considers His Playing in World Series a Great Break

By EDWARD J. NEIL

St. Louis, Oct. 9.—Early in the spring of 1928 there stumbled into the lobby of the St. Louis Cardinals' hotel in Avon Park, la., a haggard, grimy, travel-stained youngster who looked like nothing but a ball player.

"Tell Bill McKeechie," he announced with a weary grin, "that his new centerfielder has arrived."

Sunk deep in an easy chair a few feet away, his face buried in a paper, Bill McKeechie, then manager of the Cardinals, raised his eyes at the sound of his name. He looked from the husky figure of what might have been a hobo to the inquiring gaze of the desk clerk. He moved his head a trifle from side to side and retreated again behind his paper.

"He's not here just now," the desk man announced. "But I'll fix you up with a room."

Thus it was John Leonard Martin, world series hero, joined the Cardinal ball club. He had spent the money sent him to pay his fare from Oklahoma City to the training camp. He had to ride the rods of freight trains to get there.

A hot bath changed his appearance considerably, and he was back at the desk again, looking for McKeechie. The first fellow he met who would talk to him was an old friend, Blake Harper, owner of the Fort Smith club in the western association. It was Harper who had greeted Martin as follows when he appeared for work at Fort Smith years before:

"What's your name?"
"Johnny Martin."
"Nope," said Harper. "You're Pepper Martin. There are too many Johnnies in the league now."
And that was the way he got his name.

For days McKeechie, trying to tame the cocky youngster, gave him what was politely known as the "run around," avoiding him. Martin went out to the practice sessions and hung around the edges, sneaking in a catch here, a slug at the plate there, when he could horn his way in. He belted a few to the outlying districts and he dragged down first on a dead run. McKeechie gave in. He called the youngster in and offered his hand.

"You're Pepper Martin," he said, "our new centerfielder. The McKeechie, I guess you were telling the truth."

"Pepper" wasn't exactly telling the truth. He sat on the Cardinal bench through that season and was farmed out to Houston, Texas, for the 1929 campaign and Rochester, in the International League, in 1930. The past National League campaign was his first in the majors.

Not affected
He's the kind of a ball player his mates can't talk enough about, cocky, but in no way offensive, simple, unaffected, certain of his own ability, but by no means impressed with his own importance. He was walking through the Cardinal special train heading back to St. Louis, happy as a kid with a new fishing rod, getting all the Cardinals to sign a score card for him as a memento.

"What do you think of the series?" he was asked as he hustled around in his shirt sleeves, his collar open, the ends of his tie dangling down his short front. He stopped for a minute and pondered. There was absolutely no thought of himself as he answered with a big grin.

"Well, I think it's great. We're winning, ain't we?" and what a break for me. Playing in a world series in my first year in the majors. Why some good players spend a whole lifetime in these leagues and never get in a world series."

Gabby Street's voice mellowed at the sound of his name. The players will talk about him for hours.

NET STARS AT SANTA BARBARA

Ellsworth Vines and Other Leading Coast Players Play in Invitation Tourney

Santa Barbara, Cal., Oct. 9.—The Pacific Coast's leading tennis stars, including Ellsworth Vines, Pasadena, National men's singles champion, and Miss Helen Wills, Berkeley, National women's singles titleholder, to-day open the annual three-day invitational tournament.

Miss Wills, who in private life is Mrs. Fred S. Moody, will not take part in the tournament play, but is expected to appear in exhibition matches. Besides the singles matches, there will be doubles events in both men's and women's divisions and mixed doubles.

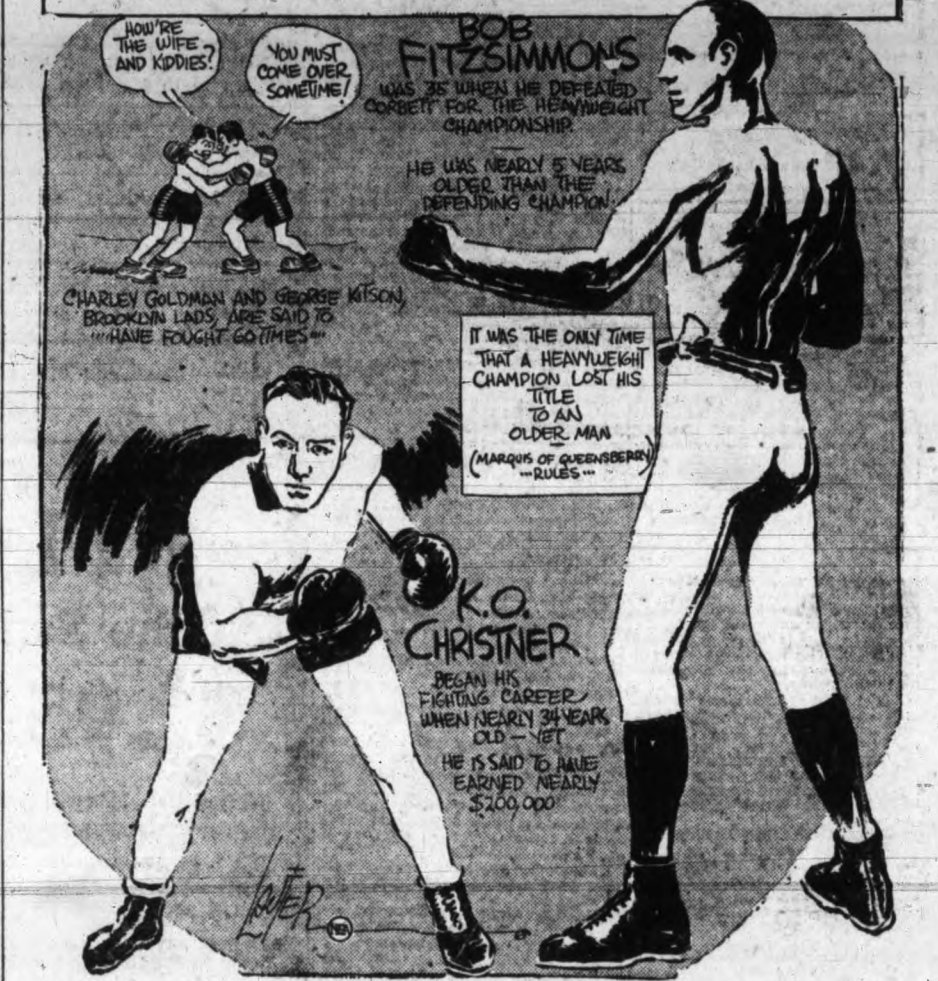

The play will mark Vines' last appearance on the tennis court this season. The University of Southern California sophomore contemplates going out for basketball at the Trojan School this winter.

Salmon Are Rising To Fly at Cowichan

Fishermen will be glad to learn that coho salmon are rising well to a fly in Cowichan Bay these days. A large number of local sportsmen have been enjoying the good run. The fish which anywhere from eight to sixteen pounds and are rising to a bucktail fly. Slow trolling or casting are the methods being used.

HOOP GAMES AT KEATING

Three Victoria Teams Will Meet Suburbanites in Opening Battles To-night

The basketball season will be officially ushered in at Keating to-night when three Victoria teams hook up with the home clubs at the Saanichton Agricultural Hall. Fred Sutton and his intermediate hoopers playing for Silvers will meet the Senior B home team, with the Green Mill meeting the Senior C hoopers. The women's game will find the home women opposing last year's oracles.

The feature game of to-night's card should provide plenty of entertainment, with Ray Kersey, Wilf Johnston and Fred Sutton as the shining lights for Silvers, while Ralph Mitchell and Bill and Pete Turgoose will be the big guns for the home team.

The Green Mill, champions of the Senior C division last year when they performed for the Fountain Service Station, will find plenty of opposition from Keating. The suburbanites led the City League for the entire schedule last year, only to be beaten in the playoffs.

The first game is scheduled to start at 8 o'clock with "Hum" Tubman handling the whistle.

SUN BEAU WILL RETIRE AFTER FINE VICTORY IN $25,000 HAWTHORNE CUP

Chicago, Oct. 9.—They say all horses and horse players die "broke," but not old Sun Beau.

Packing the fastest one-horse bankroll in all turf history, he munched his oats in peace and contentment to-day—through with racing forever and hailed as the wonder thoroughbred of the age.

He was given a rousing farewell yesterday when he crushed Mate by a length and a half in a mile and a quarter dash for his last stake—the $25,000 Hawthorne Gold Cup. The triumph added $20,000 to his all-time winnings, making it $375,744 for five years of campaigning. Sun Beau will be retired to stud immediately, owner Willis Sharpe Kilmer said.

SPORTS HALL TO BE OPENED

Spacious New Quarters of Shawnigan Lake Athletic Association Ready For Use

The new hall of the Shawnigan Lake Athletic Association will be opened by C. H. Dickie, M.P., to-morrow evening at 9 o'clock. The public has been invited and official opening will be followed by a dance.

Just twenty-one years ago the original hall, which was destroyed by fire two years ago, was opened by the late Chief Justice and Mrs. Hunter. The new hall is a two-story building with a main hall measuring fifty by ninety-two feet.

The hall is modern in every respect with electric light, hot and cold water equipment, and particular attention was paid to the dancing floor, which is considered one of the finest on the island. The dining-room will seat 100, and every attention has been given to the comfort of the public.

WORLD SERIES NOTES

Some of Mickey Cochrane's poor playing in the series, his lack of hitting and his failure to strike much of an average in thwarting Martin's attempt to steal, may be explained by his physical condition.

Mickey has been in poor condition since he was hit in the head by a pitched ball late in the season. He is playing with a strained side heavily bound in plaster and one leg tightly taped to protect a "Charley horse."

Despite his base-stealing record, Martin is not the fastest straightaway runner on the Cardinals ball club. In a seventy-five-yard dash a few days ago, Frankie Frisch beat him, Jim Wilson, the catcher, was second, and "Pepper" third.

Entries for the Victoria and District Juvenile Football League will close on Monday evening at 8 o'clock, when a meeting of the league will be held at the Y.M.C.A. Two divisions will operate this season, one under eighteen, and the other under sixteen. Delegates unable to attend the meeting are asked to phone their entries to E2676 or E2498.

Many of the players go on the stage. I refused an offer in 1913 and then reconsidered later and wired the booking agent that it was ready. He wired: What kind of act have you got—how many in company—step—drop curtain or full stage? I never answered. (Copyright, 1931, Publishers' Syndicate)

Mrs. Crowe won the September Class "A" medal round at the Colwood Golf Club with a score of 2 down. Mrs. E. Hodges carried off the prize in Class "B," finishing 3 down.

CHAMPION AND EX-CHAMPION REACH FINAL

Margery Kirkham and Ada MacKenzie Will Battle For Canadian Closed Golf Title

Toronto, Oct. 9.—The eighteen-hole final for the ninth annual Canadian women's closed golf crown will bring together Margery Kirkham, Montreal, defending champion, and Ada MacKenzie, Toronto, who has captured the championship three times in her long career as a star.

They won the right to contest to-day for the 1931 championship by defeating courageous opponents yesterday, both by 1 up. Miss Kirkham won over Mrs. C. S. Eddie, Toronto, while Miss MacKenzie advanced over Mrs. E. W. Whittington, another Toronto contender.

Both Miss Kirkham and Miss MacKenzie made fine approaches on the eighteenth hole to win their matches with a par three. The losers made a game effort, just missing their first putts for halves, which would have prolonged the contests. There was little to choose between the contestants in either semi-final. First one, then the other took the lead, but never was a safe margin established. Both Miss Kirkham and Mrs. Eddie had approximately 67%, against a par of 77. Miss MacKenzie and Mrs. Whittington were 81 and 89, respectively.

TOWNSEND TO BATTLE RAN

Vancouver Welterweight Will Make His Debut in New York This Evening

New York, Oct. 9.—Billy Townsend, welterweight smasher from Vancouver, rides into Madison Square Garden to-night intent on making his New York debut a successful one.

The Pacific Coast blonde meets Eddie Ran, somewhat of a slugger himself, in the ten-round semi-final of the Joe Sekyra-James J. Braddock ten-round feature.

Townsend rules a slight favorite over Ran. Should he halt the upward climb of his opponent, he will be matched with Paulie Walker, local welterweight sensation.

Billy is aiming for a shot at the uncrowned king of the welterweights, Jimmy McMartin, the well-oiled Irishman, who also calls Vancouver home.

Manitoba Varsity Gridders to Meet Alberta in Opener

Winnipeg, Oct. 9.—Big, hard and fast, the greatest brown football machine that has rolled out of University of Manitoba, in years yesterday evening ended the week's training grind and prepared to rest for its first important test of a season that looms brightly for the long down-trodden Winnipeg gridiron. Saturday they clash with University of Alberta here in the opening game of the Western Intercollegiate Rugby Union schedule.

The interspersed struggle will feature a card that brings together Moose Jaw and Saskatoon, in Saskatchewan, and Calgary Altomah, Tigers and Edmonton Eskimos, in Alberta. It is expected to herald a comeback for Manitoba.

Billy is aiming for a shot at the uncrowned king of the welterweights, Jimmy McMartin, the well-oiled Irishman, who also calls Vancouver home.

Manitoba Varsity Gridders to Meet Alberta in Opener

Winnipeg, Oct. 9.—Big, hard and fast, the greatest brown football machine that has rolled out of University of Manitoba, in years yesterday evening ended the week's training grind and prepared to rest for its first important test of a season that looms brightly for the long down-trodden Winnipeg gridiron. Saturday they clash with University of Alberta here in the opening game of the Western Intercollegiate Rugby Union schedule.

The interspersed struggle will feature a card that brings together Moose Jaw and Saskatoon, in Saskatchewan, and Calgary Altomah, Tigers and Edmonton Eskimos, in Alberta. It is expected to herald a comeback for Manitoba.

AT THE THEATRES

DOMINION THEATRE

Constance Bennett, who is starred in Warner Brothers picture "Bought," now playing at the Dominion Theatre, is an enthusiastic sportswoman, and is especially fond of swimming and riding. During the summer months she moves with her household, from Beverly Hills to the Malibu Beach, where she can enjoy an early morning swim each day before starting for work in the studio.

COLUMBIA THEATRE

Among the interested spectators in the circus audience that watches Joe Cook perform his merry antics in "Rain or Shine," the film version of the well-known musical comedy produced by Columbia Pictures and being shown at the Columbia Theatre, is none other than the famous heavy-weight ex-champion, James J. Jeffries. The Columbia circus was erected on a ranch at Burbank, California, owned by Jeffries, and the ex-champion was a daily visitor to the picture location. A formidable group of stars was assembled to support Joe Cook in his film debut. Among the players are Louise Fazenda, Joan Peera, William Collier Jr., Tom Howard, Charles Allen Roscoe and Adolph Milar. Frank Capra directed.

PLAYHOUSE THEATRE

All the glamour and romance of the old south is contained in the comedy of mistaken identity, "Pals First," now showing at the Playhouse Theatre. Pretty plantation settings, dainty dialects, soft music and moonlight form a charming background for a thrilling and picturesque play. Mary Moe is radiant as the girl from the south, and G. Donald Gray and Francis Sayles are hand in glove as the "pals." Evening performances commence at 8:30 o'clock, and the last matinee on Saturday at 2:30 o'clock.

COLISEUM THEATRE

The American matron who clings to perpetual youth and celebrates her "twentieth" birthday year after year would be free from amused, behind-the-scenes whisperings if she lived in the South Seas.

Thus reads an ante-mortem report of F. W. Murnau, who turned his back on civilization for eighteen months after he had become one of the outstanding film directors of the present day through his work on "The Last Laugh," "Sunrise," "Four Devils" and other productions.

COMING TO PLAYHOUSE

Commencing Monday evening at the Playhouse, G. Donald Gray and Company will present all week a comedy of matrimonial complications, entitled "Our Wives." A "comedy of arrows" it might be called, with Cupid doing some clever shooting. He has to, because four bachelors who band together for safety are destined to be pierced, although it takes him three acts in "Our Wives" to even get within range of the last man to fall. One screaming situation follows another in "Our Wives." The bachelors will be played by G. Donald Gray, Verne Layton, Basil Osborne and Lorus Bagley, while the girls will be played by Mary Moe, Ruth Keeler, Betty Kent and Fern Albright. Beginning Monday the shows will start at 8 o'clock instead of 8:30 as formerly, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2:30 o'clock.

COMING TO COLISEUM

A man has to go fifty fathoms below the water's surface to discover proof of his wife's treachery in "Fifty Fathoms Deep," the Columbia drama coming to the Coliseum Theatre to-morrow.

Leading roles in this saga of deep-sea adventure are played by Jack Holt, who is featured, Loretta Sayers, Richard Cromwell and Mary Doran. R. William Neill directed.

Pender Island

The art and curio exhibit held last Tuesday in Hope Bay Hall under the auspices of the Women's Institute was a splendid success, specimens of art work, curios, antiques and old photographs, being loaned by residents. Afternoon tea was served at small tables with green and gold covers and vases of autumn flowers.

A home-cooking stall where recipes were sold, as well as the finished article, was much patronized. About $25 was cleared and will be added to the regular funds.

The engagement has been announced of Elsie Stella Bowerman, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walton Bowerman of Hope Bay, to Cyril Weeks of Kelowna, B.C. The marriage will take place this week.

Operations have commenced for the season at the Otter Bay Saltery, and the Shingle Bay reduction plant will also open shortly.

A reception was held last week at Port Washington for Rev. and Mrs. Mayer, officially welcoming them to this parish.

A start has been made on the new club tennis court at Port Washington and it is hoped will be ready for next season. Mrs. Clague has donated the site and much of the work will be voluntary.

Alberni

Alberni, Oct. 9.—Mrs. George Forrest entertained at the tea hour on Monday at her home on Elizabeth Street, when her guests included a group of pioneer friends. Among those present were: Mrs. F. J. Bledsoe, Mrs. A. W. Neill, Mrs. Gus Cox, Mrs. J. Grievens, Mrs. J. Hill, Mrs. E. Croft, Mrs. A. McLean, Mrs. G. Goodall, Mrs. J. McFarlane, Mrs. H. P. Nightingale, Mrs. A. Rochester, Mrs. W. Swanson, Mrs. D. Parker and Miss Jessie Whyte. In the evening Mrs. Forrest was again hostess at three tables of bridge, when prizes were won by Mrs. J. J. Burke and Mrs. W. M. Holt. The invited guests were: Mrs. J. Clague, Mrs. Arnold Hanna, Mrs. J. Forrest, Mrs. W. Evans, Mrs. H. B. Carter, Mrs. J. J. Burke, Mrs. W. Anderson, Mrs. L. A. Pineo, Mrs. E. Frost, Mrs. H. Boothroyd, Mrs. A. D. Morgan and Mrs. W. M. Holt.

George Smethurst of Victoria was a visitor in the city this week, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Cozma.

CAPITOL THEATRE

RKO-Radio Pictures' new sophisticated drama, "High Stakes," is now playing at the Capitol Theatre, with Lowell Sherman, Mae Murray, Karen Morley and Edward Martindel heading a distinguished cast of players.

What happens when middle age reaches out to youth for a final fling? Should the baby-faced, worldly-wise girl be honest about her background and throw down the opportunity of luxury, leisure, wealth and travel? Should she come to her lonely old man with truth, sincerity and honesty? On the verge of retirement, forsake the advice of his closest friends and dearest companions and strive to recapture youth and gaiety which have long since fled?

COMING TO DOMINION

Hollywood's large stock of evening attire was almost exhausted during the making of "Merely Mary Ann," the latest Janet Gaynor-Charles Farrell picture coming to the Dominion Theatre to-morrow.

For the huge opera house scene, Director Henry King needed hundreds of extra players, each in the most formal of evening dress. There would have been an easy requirement to fulfill except for one thing—that nearly every studio happened likewise to be making "evening dress" scenes on those days.

The result was that swallow-tails and low-necked evening gowns were in demand, and the wardrobes of Hollywood's many costume establishments were ransacked before the clamoring throngs of players were properly equipped for their various "nights."

Beryl Mercer and J. M. Kerrigan head the supporting cast.

CAMPAIGNS AID HOME PRODUCTS

Demand For B.C. Goods Doubled in Two and Half Years

Demand for B.C. food products has at least doubled in the last two and a half years as a result of the B.C. Product Bureau's campaigns, the co-operation of manufacturers, retailers and public, and the present tariff situation. In fact, the demand for B.C. products is now so great that it is estimated that the growing demand for British Columbia products would eventually force outside firms wishing to market their products here to establish plants in the province. In many cases this had already been done.

Employers could greatly encourage home buying if they would constantly impress on their employees the need for buying B.C. products, he points out.

PLAN TO GET RIDING TRAILS

Club Formed to Develop Interest With Major K. B. Spurgin As President

With Major K. B. Spurgin as president, the Victoria Riding Club was formed yesterday evening at a meeting in St. Margaret's School and plans for developing a system of riding paths and trails to stimulate interest in riding were discussed.

The new club registered many members on the night of its formation. Colonel Grier was elected vice-president and Commander C. H. R. Slingsby, secretary-treasurer. The executive committee is composed of Mrs. D. Gillespie, Russell Ker, D. B. Carley, Major Piddington, J. McCallan and F. J. Norris.

The first move of the club, it was stated, would be to secure as large a membership as possible and thus impress upon the municipal government the desirability of developing riding paths. The co-operation of the Victoria Real Estate Board and the Chamber of Commerce already being secured, and negotiations will proceed almost directly.

F. B. Pemberton said the work could be done as unemployment relief and the actual expense was negligible beside the benefit the trails would bring. A blueprint of the proposed route was produced, showing a route along Transit Road, Beach Drive, Marine Drive, Uplands, Willows district, along Cadboro Bay Road to Gordon Head, Cedar Hill and Mount Douglas with the Willows riding schools as the starting and finishing point.

The Victoria Riding Club, it was decided, will be the parent body for any subsidiary organizations formed for polo, horse shows or gymkhanas. R. H. B. Ker read from the prospectus of the Vancouver Riding Club in explaining this point and referred to the fact that the fees in that club were $30 for men and $20 for women.

PLACE FOR PRACTICE

Mr. Ker said the B.C. Agricultural Association would throw open the horse show building for riding and jumping two or three evenings a week and the club could avail itself of the invitation. It was also announced Mr. Carley and Major Piddington would give members of the club similar privileges in regard to fees as members of their own clubs enjoyed.

Subscription rates for the club were fixed at $2 for active members, $1 for associate members and $1 for juniors. In this connection it was pointed out the fees were set low in order to attract a large membership, since the upkeep of trails would be practically nil if a large number of riders used them continually.

Canadian Press

Grand Forks, B.C., Oct. 9.—Fisher's Bridge, a large railroad trestle between Grand Forks and Ehoit, was discovered partly burned. Thursday morning by a C.P.R. patrolman. Repairs were hastily made and traffic was not interrupted.

An ash pan was used as a base for the fire. Mudslide of a bent and one of the bent pillars were charred.

FACTIONS FIGHT

Sacramento, Cal., Oct. 9.—Borrowing a leaf from western gangsters, three Hindus in a high powered touring car yesterday evening drove up to a Hindu race camp in Oroville and opened fire on workers housed there, wounding two. As a result Butte County authorities to-day were moving to stamp out a new outbreak of Hindu clan war.

OAK BAY WILL GET SEVERAL IMPROVEMENTS

Street Repairs, New Lights and Other Changes Ordered Yesterday By Council

Council Views Bus Parking Site; Hears Complaints and Award Two Money Grants

A number of road improvements were ordered, several lots reported sold, the Cadboro Bay Road widening by-law was given its final reading and other minor matters attended to at yesterday afternoon's meeting of the Oak Bay Council. Although the agenda was a fairly lengthy one, it was disposed of in quick time, there being no business of any great importance on it. Reeve E. C. Hayward occupied the chair. Municipal Engineer G. H. Richardson recommended that a new four-inch cast iron water main with a hydrant be laid on Olive Drive to replace the present one which is badly corroded. The residents of this street are petitioning for improvements to the roadway, which is in very bad shape. The council was advised. The cost of laying the new main was estimated at $900.

The council instructed the engineer's department to place a light at the intersection of Guernsey and Hampshire Road, upon the reading of a letter from L. H. Tapley of 880 Hampshire Road. He also asked for a little repair work to the road. The taxpayers on the block, he explained, are willing for the grading of the road. Mr. Tapley will be advised to secure the necessary petition for such an improvement and when this is done the council will take steps to have the roadway made more convenient.

Councillor T. J. Goodlake was appointed to make a survey of the road condition from Crescent Road to King George Terrace. The engineer advised the council that with some minor repairs and improvements to the banking around this turn, there would be sufficient room for a proper roadway. He made the suggestion that the corner be rounded with a curve of 100 feet radius, which would start and end about thirty-one feet from the corner and lie about thirteen feet in on the lot at the corner.

INSPECT SITE

The resolution drafted at the last Oak Bay Police Commission meeting to the effect "that parking areas for the buses on Monterey Avenue, north and south, be placed forty feet back from the corner of Oak Bay Avenue" came in for much discussion at yesterday's meeting. Councillor Richard Angus was of the opinion that forty feet from the corner was too far away and the other members of the council agreed with him. The matter was laid on the table and, following the meeting, the reeve and councillors paid a visit to the corner in question and inspected it and the position of a bus parked there at the time.

The engineer's department advised that the Hammerley-barn on Crescent Road is structurally sound but somewhat unsightly and dilapidated, but with repairs to the roof and replacement of windows it could be made a useful building. The owner of the barn will be communicated with and will be asked to do something to fix it up. The complaint about the barn originally came from J. V. Stinson. Mrs. G. M. Morris yesterday drew the attention of the council to the dilapidated condition of the garage structure on Oak Bay Avenue, near Mitchell Street. The owner will be asked if some repairs cannot be made.

The council granted the request of the Victoria Amateur Swimming Club for a grant of twenty-five dollars to help meet expenses in connection with the staging of the annual school children's gala at the Crystal Glen on October 24. The gala is open to children from the Oak Bay schools. The council also granted ten dollars to the social service welfare scheme, whereby all charitable organizations in Greater Victoria will be brought under one control. The sum will help in organizing the scheme, which was explained in a letter from F. E. Winslow.

WIRING COMPLAINT

A letter from the City Council of Victoria, regretting that the Oak Bay Council had cause to complain of the service of the city's wiring inspector, was read.

The council granted the use of the Oak Bay park to the Oak Bay School Athletic Association for the winter. All applications for the park should now be made to the secretary of the association.

A letter explaining the tariffs and routes of the Royal Blue Line, which operates a fleet of buses in Oak Bay from H. L. Sangster, president, was read yesterday. A complaint was received a short time ago from store owners in Oak Bay to the effect that the buses were taking business away from the municipality and bringing it to Victoria, and suggesting that a lower rate be charged from outlying districts of the municipality to the main business district, where the stores are located. A copy of Mr. Sangster's letter will be sent to the complaining store owners.

RUNAWAY CAR HITS HOUSE

"The runaway train went over the hill and she blew"—runs a ragtime song. A car owned by Dr. H. Griffiths, 1215 Oscar Street, emulated the famous train yesterday evening, according to a police report.

The car was parked on Burdett Avenue, near the old Christ Church Cathedral, its brakes slipped and the car started off by itself down the hill, over the hump at Blanshard Street, skipped through a fence and into the side of a house at 823 Penwell Street. It tore the boards on the dwelling and started the occupants, who thought an earthquake was due.

REFORD FAMILY STARTED RICE MILLING HERE

Eric Reford Inspects Site of Mount Royal Mills Established by Grandfather

Atlantic Steamship Lines Keeping Services Intact to Aid Canadian Export Trade

Tracing the early history of the Reford family in Victoria, Eric Reford, vice-president of Robert Reford and Sons, Montreal, and general manager for the Cunard Steamship Company in Canada, this morning visited the site of the old Mount Royal rice mills which were established here by his grandfather, Robert Reford, about half a century ago.

The original mill buildings are today occupied by the Gilman Iron Works on Store Street. Mr. Reford recalled the time when the Mount Royal rice mills were built here by his grandfather, who acquired and brought out to the Pacific Coast from Scotland the famous square-rigger Thermopylae, which he operated in the rice carrying trade between China and Victoria. His father, Robert Wilson Reford, also was identified in a business way with the rice mills here.

Reford carried away with him this morning an interesting souvenir in the shape of a rusty piece of tin stenciled with Chinese characters representing the original trade mark of the firm.

The steamship lines of the Atlantic, in spite of the business depression, are making an exceptional effort to maintain services in order to give Canada every opportunity to develop her export trade, said Mr. Reford in discussing steamship operations on the Atlantic coast.

Although passenger travel has dropped off tremendously, it was a noticeable fact that eastbound travel had been greater than westbound business.

The popular short cruises operated by the Atlantic steamship lines between New York and Halifax resulted in 65,000 people being landed at the Nova Scotia port last summer, Mr. Reford explained.

The Cunard Line operated the liners Aquitania, Berengaria and Mauretania on these cruises between transatlantic trips.

Mr. Reford, who reached Victoria yesterday, accompanied by Mrs. Reford, is making a tour of inspection of the Cunard offices in Canada over which he has control. He states that the firm's operations are being handled by a large proportion, holds great promise, as the Canadian fruit has a marked advantage over fruit from the United States by reason of exchange conditions.

Two Cunard winter cruises are announced. The Franconia will leave eastbound from New York on January 9, and the Scythia will leave westbound on December 1, via Havana and Panama.

Mr. and Mrs. Reford will leave here at the week-end for Seattle.

Police Seek Mutilator Of Encyclopedia

City detectives are searching for someone who, according to a report of the Board of Trustees of the Victoria Public Library, tore from the Encyclopedia Britannica, pasted the pages with the books of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, and the chapter on Hebrew language. They were taken from four separate volumes of the encyclopedia.

A library official suggested however, that the person who mutilated the encyclopedia may be a fundamentalist who considers toward religious matters unorthodox and irreverent. The person may have felt bound to tear out the sheets, so that the minds of other readers might not be perverted.

Because of the particular nature of the articles removed, the official does not believe the mutilation to be the act of an atheist. But it is pointed out even if the person is actuated by a conscientious ideal, the deed is a direct act of theft and mutilation of public property and is punishable by a jail term.

Famous New York Traveler Reporter Will Bring Irving Cobb Here

Will Settle in Victoria When He Ends Roaming, He Tells Commissioner

Robert "Bob" Davis, famous and much traveled columnist of The New York Sun, has seen Vancouver Island during the last three days in company with George I. Warren, Victoria and Island Publicity Commissioner. As a result, according to Mr. Warren, Mr. and Mrs. Davis have selected Victoria as the place where they will live when the well-known newspaperman, who has covered more miles than any other man in the business on his assignment of seeing everything everywhere and write about it, decides to scrap his portable typewriter and settle down.

Before he makes his home here Mr. Davis will come to Victoria for another holiday. He has already planned to bring Irving Cobb, one of his numerous friends of the literary world, here for a fishing trip in 1932. Besides being a famous newspaper correspondent whose syndicated articles reach millions of readers, Mr. Davis is known as a "notorious fisherman." Mr. Cobb shares his enthusiasm.

"Mr. Davis is not being merely complimentary when he said he would settle in Victoria. He meant it," said Mr. Warren. "He has had a perfect visit here. He has fished all over Europe, Canada, America and landed big ones in Scotland and Florida, but says he has never found anything to equal fishing on Vancouver Island."

The weather was ideal for a three days trip up-island and salmon and grise were rising to the fly at Brentwood, Cowichan and Campbell River. He enjoyed some good golf games with congenial friends, got five or six interesting stories and met many hospitable island people, and left for Vancouver this afternoon considerably impressed.

LOTS OF STORIES

As a result of his visit Mr. Davis has material for stories of the sea—recovered from the veteran sea captain, W. N. Rutt, whom he met at Kilmalu, Mill Bay; on Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Butcher, whose hospitality he enjoyed at their famous gardens; on the historical pig of San Juan which nearly killed Britain and the United States into a war; on fishing on the island of Java, including the King of Siam's success in landing some salmon during his recent visit; on Gen. Noel Money and his experiences in the war; on the famous Victoria Hotel, and on the island in general. Some of the stories have already been wired to his paper.

During his trip up the island he had a host of interesting stories. He became host of the Malahat at 7.30 o'clock in the morning. He was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert J. Penderay at the Esquimalt Lagoon, and of Major Panning at the Esquimalt Hotel, Cowichan Bay. Representative of up-island Boards of Trade helped to show him the island.

Grise which he caught were cooked for him in a Victoria Hotel, and he distributed salmon which he caught to friends in Victoria.

Before leaving to-day J. F. Forde, a local sportsman, engaged him to show him over the drydock. Mr. Davis will spend a day in Victoria before going back to New York.

FOLLOWED CAR LONG DISTANCE

Stanley Pater, auto driver who was followed by a motorcycle constable from Harriet Road on the Island Highway to Haultain Street, was fined $25 by Magistrate George Jay in the City Police Court this morning for driving to the common danger.

Constable Douglas Bone said he paced Mr. Pater along the Gorge Road, up Hillside Avenue to Cedar Hill Road and then down Fernwood to Haultain Street before he was able to stop him because of interfering traffic. Mr. Pater traveled between forty and forty-five miles an hour, he said.

Mr. Pater said he thought the officer was mistaken as he had been traveling at a moderate rate of speed, obeying all traffic rules.

ASK AID TO STOP FIRES

Prevention Committee Gives Final Hints For Removal of Inflammable Goods

Fire Prevention Week will close to-morrow and every citizen is requested by the committee in charge of the campaign to do his best to remove all causes of fire. Every year there are heavy fire losses in Canada, millions of dollars worth of property being damaged and many lives lost.

Citizens are expected to see that all ashes are kept in metal receptacles; that all rags and waste are kept in standard metal waste cans; that rubbish is never allowed to accumulate in or near buildings, and that gasoline, naphtha and other volatile oils are not kept in buildings. Extreme care should be taken when they are being used. Open fires should be protected with sheet iron or be bricked up. Stove pipes should be securely riveted and run direct through a brick chimney and not through floors or partitions. Staircases should be kept clear at all times, and safety matches should be used.

Hat boxes and tissue paper kept in the attic or the basement do no good but might some day cause a lot of harm. The committee asks citizens to take a good look around and get these fire breeders out of their houses and yards.

HOOVER MAKING INQUIRY INTO RAILROAD BOARD

Hundreds of Middle Western Banks Hold Rail Issues
Stabilization Desired

Canadian Press
Washington, Oct. 9. — President Hoover is making an extensive inquiry into possible means of stabilizing railroad bonds.

Hundreds of banks, particularly in the middle west, have invested heavily in railroad bonds.

such bonds because of a steadily declining demand for loans in the agricultural areas.

Because of declining revenues many of the railroad bonds have been dropped from the list of securities eligible for purchase by banks and mutual savings associations.

These banks, therefore, have asked the general railroad bond situation brought under the scrutiny of the President and such government agencies as would be available for agencies as would be available for an investigation.

The inquiry of the President started to-day and number of government officials have been instructed to give him full reports.

Canadian Press
Ottawa, Oct. 9.—The Supreme Court of Canada today dismissed the appeal of the defunct brokerage house, Soloway, Mills and Company, in the case in which judgment was awarded to E. Sunderland, Vancouver, B.C., in the sum of $8,075 as damages when the brokers sold 1,000 shares of Sunderland's stock without, he alleged, his authorization.

Underland originally claimed $18,000. The brokers had held for him had risen from $1.35—the price at which they had bought the stock—to $2.25. ## SECOND CLASS NOW TOURIST

Better Accommodation and Lower Rates on Berengaria and Aquitania

The Cunard Line has abandoned its second class accommodation on the liners Aquitania and Berengaria. It was learned in Victoria to-day by passenger agents. All the second class space on these huge transatlantic liners has been turned over to tourist class, and part of the former tourist class to third cabin. Cost of travel in this class has been lowered with the improvement, and it is now possible to cross the Atlantic on one of these deluxe liners for a very reasonable rate.

The abolition of the second cabin in the Aquitania and Berengaria means the final disappearance of this class of steamship travel from all the ships in the fleet of the Cunard Line. At one time most of the twenty-four ships in the fleet carried large second cabin accommodations. All former second cabin space the Berengaria will now have a capacity of 620 tourist class passengers, while the Aquitania will increase her tourist class total to 470.

In connection with the changes, H. P. Borer, general passenger manager of the Cunard Line, has stated by letter: "Our decision to turn all of the second cabin accommodations in the Aquitania and Berengaria sets the final seal of approval on the policy we inaugurated in 1924 of reserving accommodations of good quality, but at low rates for the great American tourist class. At that time we initiated tourist third cabin, now called tourist class."

"Without indulging in prophecy, we sincerely believe that this fall the public will recognize more than ever the enduring value of the enhanced purchasing power of the travel dollar."

Three Freighters Due Here To-morrow For Lumber Cargoes

Three freighters will be in port, two being due to load lumber and one to discharge cargo.

In the morning King Brothers expect the freighters Olympia and Golden Coast. They will both go to the Ogden Point piers, the Olympia to take 300,000 feet of lumber for Orient ports, and the Golden Coast 500,000 feet for Australia.

In the afternoon the freighter West Cuseta is due at the Rithet piers to discharge 500 tons of corn from South Africa. She is also listed to load a parcel of lumber at this port before she sails from the northwest.

The Olympia is the largest of the three, being registered at 6,400 tons. She has a length of 401 feet, a breadth of fifty-four feet and a depth of thirty-two feet. She was built in Seattle in 1919, and is owned by the Tacoma-Orient Steamship Company.

The Golden Coast is a ship of 5,700 tons, with a length of 410 feet, a breadth of fifty-four feet and a depth of twenty-seven feet. She was built in 1930, is registered at San Francisco and is owned by the Pacific and Orient Navigation Company.

The West Cuseta is a ship of 5,428 registered tons, with a length of 410 feet, a breadth of fifty-four feet and a depth of twenty-seven feet. She was built in San Pedro in 1920, and is registered there.

Two Fishermen Are Drowned; Third Is Shot

Canadian Press

Prince Rupert, Oct. 9, George Ryan and George Cooper of Port Simpson, B.C., were drowned yesterday afternoon in York Canal when their boat struck a rock and foundered.

The bodies have not been recovered. A third man escaped.

Another death is reported with the finding of the body of Peter Anderson, Norwegian fisherman, near the shore on Eccles River, on the beach, about twenty feet away, a rifle with one empty shell was found.

Anderson's boat was also in the neighborhood. His body showed a bullet wound. It is presumed that the fisherman, when jumping ashore from his boat, accidentally discharged the rifle, killing himself.

Heart of Liane

by MABEL McELLIOTT

At the table she was almost gay. But she soon discovered the conversation was being taken out of her hands. Although technically she was mistress Tressa subtly made her feel an interloper. Tressa talked of people whom she and Clive had known all their lives, of places Liane had never seen.

Occasionally as though with difficulty she politely included Liane in her conversation. The younger woman was no match for Tressa's studied suavity. Clive felt the tension in the atmosphere but did not know exactly what was happening.

As they sat over their coffee a little later one of the maids summoned Clive to the telephone and the two women were left together. The constraint was almost tangible. Tressa fidgeted with her bracelets and walked about humming a little tune. She did not even trouble to make conversation.

Quite suddenly Liane determined to bring was openly into camp. "Did you ever get that box of thumb tacks?" she asked coolly, eyeing the other girl.

Tressa stared. "What? Whatever are you talking about?"

"The tacks you borrowed the day I was driving into town for my fitting," Liane said with deadly quietness. Her glance never wavered from the other's and she had the satisfaction of seeing her adversary flush.

"I haven't the faintest idea what you're driving at," Tressa announced with cool insolence. "I'm afraid you imagine things." She began to hum again very softly and continued to pace up and down, waving her cigarette to and fro. Clive's voice could be heard faintly from the booth down the hall.

Suddenly Tressa turned, flaring upon her hostess, her nostrils dilated and her voice trembling with anger.

"You'd better not try to start anything at this late day," she cried furiously. "You'd better do what you want to do straight out this mess you're in!"

Let Clive go with half an eye can see how miserable he is!"

"How dare you?" Liane exclaimed very low. "How dare you talk to me like this?"

Tressa's laugh rang out triumphant and shrill.

"Why not here?" she said. "Why not? I belong here more than you do and you know it. What's more, I shall be here after you've been forgotten."

Liane was trembling and her hands were like ice. She was suddenly weak, swaying on her feet. All at once Tressa's manner changed. With lightning quickness she was at the other girl's side. As Clive came in she was saying soothingly and gently, "Here, lean on me. You're not quite well yet. I'm afraid. Perhaps you ought to go upstairs."

Clive, all solicitude, helped Liane to her room. She was so shaken she did not trust herself to speak and she knew that she suspected nothing of what had transpired. Long after Clive thought her asleep the girl lay, hands tightly clenched, hearing below the murmur of Tressa's voice, soft and caressing. She heard the answering rumble of her husband's tones.

What, Liane wondered in agony, were they saying?

To be young is to be impatient. Tomorrow will not do. Liane, thrashing about for a solution to her difficulties, was minded to go to Clive and show her cards. She wanted to say, "Shall we make a clean break of it? I think we'd better. We can't go on this way."

Liane scarcely knew what held her back from this move because as the days passed and Tressa's air of proprietorship over Clive deepened her agony increased. She said to herself, "This is unendurable. Anything would be better than this."

But because she had suffered greatly in the past year she peculiarly despised and then hopeful.

The day Tressa drove into town with Clive Liane endured agonies of jealousy. The worst of it was that she had no right to resentment. Only four months ago, she had said to Clive, "I love someone else." She had expressed sympathy and understanding. She had not stopped to wonder how he might be hurt.

"I've learned a lot about love," Liane mused sadly. "I may make a great many mistakes in the future but never the same ones again."

Muriel came out that day for tea. She was a gay and bright-eyed girl in a red cap and coat and bright hat which made her look like robin red-breast himself.

They talked of nothing and of everything as they sipped their tea. Liane found Muriel watching her curiously. The other girl blurted out suddenly, "Don't think me a busy-body, but I must tell you everybody's talking about the dead set Tressa Lord's making at Clive. People wonder why you have her in the house. She even goes to his office. It looks pretty bad. I hate being a babbling, but you're such an innocent I thought perhaps you ought to be told."

Calmly Liane said, "It's all right. I know all about it." She managed a smile but her heart was lead in her breast.

Muriel shrugged. "Well, I suppose you know your own happiness but to me that girl's a cobra. I wouldn't trust her three minutes with my boy friend."

"She's our guest," Liane said in that same lifeless tone. "Nothing could be worse."

"Oh, my dear!" Muriel gave her a pitying look. "Don't be that way! You know things happen. You can't close your eyes to them and pretend they don't exist."

Liane said, "Thanks for telling me. I know you mean it in the friendliest way but honestly everything is all right."

After Muriel had gone she walked up and down, distraught.

"There must be something in all this," she told herself. "Perhaps Clive is trying to let me see it. Perhaps he is just giving me a chance to divorce him."

She tried to shut her eyes to the possibility but Muriel's words made her see the danger ahead.

As the dinner hour neared she nervously turned to the door and looked into the hall. The plan had been for Clive to drive Tressa home from town but when the clock struck eight the two were still unaccounted for. Liane, wearing her black frock, went into the serving pantry.

"You're certain Mr. Clive hasn't called?"

"No, not yet."

"Perhaps the connection is broken. It seems odd we haven't heard."

The girl lifted the receiver from the hall telephone and held it to her ear. "No, this is all right. The operator said 'Number please' like she always does."

Liane wandered back to the library. She picked up a book and laid it down. With a wrap over her shoulders she went into the garden and watched the road. Down the turnpike half a mile away the headlights of a steady procession of cars could be seen. None turned into the drive.

As she went back into the house, the hall clock chimed the half hour. With an air of decision she rang the bell.

"Ellen, I'll dine alone. Mr. Clive—paugh! has been delayed."

She could imagine the whispering of the servants behind the closed doors.

At ten o'clock she went upstairs. She thought, "This is the end. This has been done deliberately to shame me."

Trembling with anger she disrobed. She turned out all the lights save the one in the lamp over her bed. She strove to read but the print danced before her eyes. As the clock struck eleven she heard the car wheels in the drive. She put cold hands to her cheeks. The face burned as with fever.

Liane heard voices in the lower hall. Tressa's mirthful and animated. She caught the low rumble of Clive's answer. Perhaps they were laughing at her!

She turned a page, unseeing, and an instant later heard a knock at the door. For the space of three heartbeats she held herself rigid. Then, "Who's there?" she said in a strange voice.

"It's I, Clive. May I come in?"

He turned the knob. He stood there, windblown, in his grey suit. There was a smudge on his cheek.

"Who's in the room?" he asked. The door was ajar.

Her tone was high, strained.

"I'm awfully sorry about tonight. We had a flat just outside Rockville Centre. Not near a garage, so I had to change it myself."

"I see," she said. The words were low.

He looked at her oddly. "Sorry if it put you out but I knew when Tressa phoned you would worry."

Liane sat up very stiff and straight, the folds of her lacy negligee falling away from her young shoulders.

"But she didn't."

"Didn't phone? Oh, yes she did. His air of perplexity seemed real. If it hadn't been for what Muriel had told her Liane might almost have believed him.

"All right, if you want it that way," she stared at him balefully, defying him to lie to her. A year ago she hadn't cared what any man did. Now his actions were of prime importance to her.

He said lamely, "I hope you didn't mind a solitary evening too much."

She laughed bitterly. "Not at all. It's all right, then."

If she had been in position to do so she would have stamped her foot at this. Must he be reassured when he had been out philandering? In exasperation she cried, "Yes, it's all right."

She wished he would go away before she started to weep. Instead he came a step nearer. "What's that you're reading?"

She held the book out at arm's length.

Awkwardly he said, "Tressa. Some of those snappy good. Didn't you like it or I might have got you some of the others."

She caught, at the folds of lace falling across her young breast. Tears welled at the back of her eyes. Clive looked at the page she had marked. She knew the words by heart. There was something unbearably poignant about them:

"Oh, there are eyes that he can see. And hands to make his hands reveal."

But to my lover I must be only a voice."

"Oh, there are breasts to bear his head. And lips whereon his lips can lie. But I must be till I am dead. Only a cry."

He put down the book quietly and looked at her. The bright tears were falling at last. He thought angrily, "Must she weep for that man always?"

"Good night," he said, soft-voiced. He felt a boor, desecrating a shrine.

She raised those brimming eyes to his. How was he to know that she wept for him and him alone? She wanted to hold out her arms, to clasp him to her breast against her heart.

Instead she said "Good night."

Clive closed the door softly, shutting her in with her tears.

Tressa stood watching him amusedly as he turned away. "My dear man," she began laughing.

He wheeled. "You? I thought you'd turned in."

"I hadn't. I wanted a final smoke and hadn't a single one left."

She exhibited her case of silver gilt and jade as proof. "My dear man, how long has this been going on?" she inquired as they went downstairs together. She looked back at the closed door.

Horoscope

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1931

Astrologers read this as rather an uncertain day, but several benefic aspects are active.

In the early morning hours all financial matters should be pushed actively. It is an auspicious time to adjust money obligations.

Women may be fairly fortunate in love affairs to-day, but the wise will reserve decisions regarding marriage.

Advertising is subject to the most stimulating planetary government and newspapers should profit.

Changes in the public taste regarding periodicals will be manifested before the end of the year. It is foretold for there will be a demand for serious and reliable material.

This should be a favorable way for week-end journeys, but the perils of romance will be great. Astrologers' prognostications for persons of all ages a peculiar trend toward sentimentality. Many marriages will be ill-chosen.

The evening should be a most fortunate time for entertaining and should be marked by memorable hospitalities. Many elaborate banquets in New York and Washington, D.C., are foretold, and distinguished foreign visitors will be numerous in the coming winter.

This should be a rarely lucky day for a sailing. Ocean journeys begun under this rule of the stars are supposed to bring many happy experiences. But while this configuration continues there may be a sense of high nervous tension and quarrels may not be far off.

It is not safe to discuss either a golf or a bridge score under this planetary government.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year of good fortune. Writers should be especially lucky.

Children born on this day probably will be studious and clever. Many subjects of this sign reach great success.

Friedrich Naumann, Arctic explorer, was born on this day, 1861. Others who have celebrated it as a birthday include Benjamin West, 1725, a famous painter; Edna Dean Proctor, 1838, poet.

BEDTIME STORY

Uncle Wiggily's Little Trick

(By HOWARD R. GARIS)

Uncle Wiggily was poking around in the tall grass with a long, thin stick, on the end of which was an iron knob. The rabbit gentleman hopped to and from in the long grass.

"What's he doing?" asked the Bob Cat who sat on a little hill looking down at the rabbit gentleman.

"I should say he was cutting the grass," remarked the Furry Fox, who was sitting on the hill beside the Bob Cat.

"Nonsense!" growled the Woosie Wolf, who was the third member of the party of Bad Chaps sitting on the little hill. "Uncle Wiggily is fishing and as soon as he catches one I'm going down and catch him."

"Fishing! Fishing!" howled the Bob Cat, getting up to see if any flies were sitting on his silly little tail. "Fishing! Ho! Ho! That shows how much you know about it."

"That's right!" chimed in the Fox. "Anybody except a Woosie Wolf would know Uncle Wiggily was cutting grass."

"No, he isn't cutting grass, either," mewed the Bob Cat. "That shows how much you know about it." And, having made sure there were no flies on his tail the Bob Cat sat down in the grass on top of the hill again. As a matter of fact the Bob Cat had such a silly little tail, no bigger than the littlest finger on baby's hand, that it would have been a very small fly who could have found room to sit. But enough of that.

"That's right!" chimed in the Fox. "Anybody except a Woosie Wolf would know Uncle Wiggily was cutting grass."

And, having made sure there were no flies on his tail the Bob Cat sat down in the grass on top of the hill again. As a matter of fact the Bob Cat had such a silly little tail, no bigger than the littlest finger on baby's hand, that it would have been a very small fly who could have found room to sit. But enough of that.

"That's right!" chimed in the Fox. "Anybody except a Woosie Wolf would know Uncle Wiggily was cutting grass."

Finds Is Not Very Well
ReceivedMr
And Mrs—

"The Idea That a Wife Should Make an Effort To Retain Her Husband's Affections Makes No Hit With Wives—They Feel That Their Husbands Should Go on Loving Them, Anyway"

THERE is nothing else in the world that infuriates women so much as to be given a few well-meant words of advice on how to retain a husband's affection. It makes them mad through and through to be told that if they want their husbands to keep on loving them they must keep themselves lovable.

"What!" they cry, as with one shrill voice, "am I to spend the balance of my life after I am married vamping my husband? Do I have to keep myself dolled up and easy on the eyes to prevent him from looking at flappers? Do I have to flatter and cajole him along the road he ought to follow of his own initiative? Do I have to do stunts like a vaudeville performer to amuse and entertain him to keep him nailed to his own fireside of an evening? Do I have to use as much finesse in dealing with him as I would if I were negotiating a disarmament treaty?"

"Well, I will not. And that is flat. That is not my idea of marriage. No husband is worth that much trouble. Absolutely not."

And that is the way ninety-nine out of a hundred wives feel about it. They seem to think there is some degradation in making an effort to please a mere husband.

I wonder why, for it is the law of life that we not only have to work to get every good thing, but we have to work still harder to hold it. There is never a place where we can sit down and fold our hands and take things easily and say, now I've got my heart's desire and nothing can take it from me. Always it slips out of our grasp if we do not bend every energy toward keeping it fast.

If we make a fortune we must use eternal vigilance to keep it. The greatest opera singer, the most famous actress, the most popular movie star must use their every talent to hold their audiences. It is not enough to have captured their public one night. They have to do it again every night.

The successful business woman has to toil incessantly if she holds down her good job. The professional woman has to make a continual effort to please her clients or her patients and use never-ending diplomacy in dealing with them.

So, when you come right down to brass tacks, what is there any more lowering to a woman's dignity in her striving to be popular with her husband than there is in her trying to get the glad hand from an audience? What is there more humiliating to her in her jollying along her husband than there is in her jollying along the boss in her office? Why should she object so strenuously and indignantly to the idea of handling her husband with gloves when she expects as a matter of course to use all the subtlety of which she is capable in dealing with those with whom she comes in contact in business?

Nobody knows. Perhaps women themselves do not know why it riles them so much to be reminded of the fact that if they desire to be kissed they must keep themselves kissable. Perhaps it is because their vanity cannot endure the stab of being told that there is nothing alluring to a man in a slovenly woman with cold cream on her face and a breath that reeks of onions or that a dull and stupid wife can bore a husband until he flees from her to save his life.

Or perhaps they are too lazy to make the effort to make a comfortable and cheerful home. Or they are too selfish to be willing to sacrifice their own pleasure to their husband's happiness. Or they are too self-centered to try to control their tempers or to stop nagging. Or they are so neurotic that they get a thrill out of whining and complaining.

But whatever the reason, the idea that a wife should make an effort to retain her husband's affections makes no hit with wives. They feel that their husbands should go on loving them, anyway, no matter how they look, no matter how stupid they get, no matter how badly they treat them. Which would, of course, make matrimony a perfectly lovely graft for women if only the theory worked out in real life.

Unfortunately, it does not. Romance dies of disillusion. The dream of fireless companionship vanishes into thin air before an untidy hearth and a wife who never has a new idea, or anything interesting to talk about. No man's love survives slovenliness, bickering, arguments, lack of understanding and appreciation. Man is an imperfectly domesticated animal at best and the only way a wife can keep one eating out of her hand is by feeding him sugar.

Such being the case and every woman being perfectly cognizant of the situation, how strange that they should resort using in the home the same tactics that they use out of it. For if every wife would use a much diplomacy in trying to get along with her husband as she does in trying to get along with her business employer and if every wife strove as hard to hold her husband as she does to hold her public, it would do more than any other one thing to keep men from getting that tired feeling about about the time they are middle-aged.

A Gift to Newlyweds

Now and then, "newlyweds" receive a playful present—a can opener. If you asked a person who gave such a present why he did so, he might reply:

Coolies bringing tin from mine.

The bride doesn't know much about cooking, so she will have to take out of the meals from cans.

The fact is that a good can opener is not a bad wedding present. Even in times when the wife is an excellent cook, food is often provided from cans. Millions of cans of salmon, tomatoes, corn and whatnot are turned out and sold each week. Tin has made a canned food industry possible. It is widely used in making cans, and it must be coated with tin to prevent rust.

Tin is taken from ore called "tinne." In a recent year, 161,000 tons of tin were produced. Two-thirds of the entire amount came from Asia. The Malay States are the most important source of the metal, but there are large tin deposits in China and the Indies.

North America produces very little tin, but Bolivia in South America has nearly output of more than 30,000 tons.

Instone is usually found near granite rocks—often in the beds of rivers. The ore is smelted and the "tin" which comes to the top is refined.

Copper and tin melted together will produce "bronze." Bronze was used by people of ancient times. Bronze is much stronger than pure copper.

Lead and tin mixed together produce "pewter." Usually four parts of tin are used to one part of lead.

Solder commonly is made from equal parts of tin and lead.

Tinfoil is made from tin rolled into thin sheets. Sometimes a little copper or a little lead is mixed with the tin before the rolling takes place.

Thus we see that tin is an important gift of Nature. This metal makes it possible for us to have solder to mend leaks in pipes, tinfoil to wrap candy bars and, above all, a coating for cans which the bride may open.

His Life Was One Long Sick Headache

Definitely Relieved by Carter's Little Liver Pills

Some people are constipated from birth; but most humans bring constipation upon themselves. How YOU became constipated doesn't matter. How you can acquire natural habits does. One thing is sure—you must pay attention to your liver. Mr. V. H. Thornton discovered this. He writes: "For many years I have suffered with that distressing complaint constipation, sick headache and indigestion. It was a distressing day for me when a friend recommended Carter's Little Liver Pills. I can honestly say results have been marvelous." Vegetables, as everyone knows, promote health. Dr. Carter's Little Liver Pills are entirely vegetable and should not be confused with ordinary laxatives. These wonderful little pills will tone up your liver, invigorate your digestive tract and keep you in the best of health. Sold by druggists for over 60 years. 25c and 75c red packages.

British Electors Hear Appeals For Votes For The Coalition Ministry

INTERNATIONAL VIEW REQUIRED

World-wide Understanding Best Weapon Against War,
Says Peter Manniche

In the promotion of international understanding and friendship, the development of thought along international lines was of cardinal importance. Such a policy could be forwarded by education, Peter Manniche, head of the International School at Elnore, Denmark, told members of the High School and Elementary School Teachers' Association, the New Education Fellowship and the National Council of Education in an informal talk in Spencer's private dining-room yesterday afternoon.

Dr. S. J. Willis, Superintendent of Education for the province, introduced the speaker.

The development of an international outlook was one of the best weapons with which war could be combated, Mr. Manniche stated. It was the work of the teaching profession and those interested in education to concentrate on this. The press, the radio and the church were also powerful agents in broadening the mind, he continued.

In some detail the speaker outlined the activities and background of his school at Elnore and dealt with the characteristics of the Danish people which he attended it.

Major Fred Ney, of the National Council of Education, was arranging to have a group visit the school next summer, it was announced.

YEAR EXTENSION ON POWER PLANS

September of Next Year Now Set as Time For Campbell
River Work

One year's extension in the time set for the Vancouver Island Power Commission to commence power development at Campbell River has been granted, according to a government announcement made today.

Under a certificate of approval granted September 13, 1929, the company was granted a certificate of approval of its undertaking relating to its application for a license to divert and use for power purposes 2,580 cubic feet of water from Campbell River. Surveys and plans were filed and the time set for the commencement of the work was September 1, 1931.

In June of this year the company sought an extension to September 1, 1932, on the grounds that the general depression made it inadvisable to proceed with the work. This request has been granted in an announcement made today by J. Hinchcliffe, acting Minister of Lands.

MacFaddens To Print Magazines In Canada Now

H. Lovick, wholesale magazine distributor here, recently attended a convention called by the Macfadden Publications when at the Royal York Hotel in Toronto. Wholesalers from every city in the Dominion were present.

Announcement was made by E. Zoty that six of the magazines published by the company would be printed in Canada, thus ensuring that there would be no increase in price to the Canadian readers.

The company intends to start an exclusive advertising campaign in the Canadian newspapers from coast to coast, Mr. Lovick said. The contract for printing in Canada will amount to about $600,000 a year.

Special mention was made that Liberty, which has a large sale on the news stands, would still sell at the old price.

Lashes Are Ordered For Ontario Youth

Canadian Press
Stratford, Ont., Oct. 8.—James "Red" Short, London youth who pleaded guilty a few days ago to a charge of kidnapping Traffic Officer M. Hodgson of Watford, last July, was sentenced by Police Magistrate J. A. Makins here yesterday to five years in the Kingston Penitentiary and ten strokes of the lash.

Ami Lamontagne of Toronto in an escape three months ago when the pair forced the officer to drive their car for hundreds of miles.

Arriving at Mitchell, Lamontagne held up a garage at the point of a revolver and wounded a youth who was in the garage. He escaped, but was caught next morning and is now serving a ten-year term in the Kingston Penitentiary.

UNUSUAL CASE OF AMNESIA

Denver, Colo., Oct. 9.—The "scarecrow man" standing rigid and mute in a room of the Colorado Psychopathic Hospital with his arms outstretched, was identified yesterday as Charles Mays of Beardley, Kas. A brother, Wesley Mays, who had seen a newspaper clipping of the patient, made the identification.

Mays was found in a cornfield near Holyoke, Colo., last Sunday posing as a scarecrow and has not relaxed his statue-like tension since. He gave no indication of recognizing his brother yesterday.

Physicians said it appeared to be a case of amnesia and aphasia, but it would be several days before the diagnosis could be completed.

Sir Herbert Samuel, Leader of Liberal Cabinet Group, Makes Speech; Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, Conserva- tive Leader, Issues Manifesto

Canadian Press
London, Oct. 9.—Sir Herbert Samuel, Home Secretary and leader of the Liberal free trade wing, opened his general election campaign yesterday evening when he addressed a crowded meeting of Liberals in the west riding of Bradford. His speech followed the issuance earlier in the day of a manifesto by Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, Lord President of the Council and leader of the Conservatives.

"We are told the Prime Minister is working for a doctor's mandate to give the patient whatever treatment his condition requires," declared Sir Herbert Samuel. "It is proverbial doctors differ. Our task is to try to arrive at a correct diagnosis and prescribe an agreed cure. If we don't, our only agreement may be at a post-mortem and our only common opinion might be such as to cause death."

"I for one, and I think the Liberal Party as a whole, wish the government to go on with its work. That is what the nation desired and expected when the National Government was formed. I hold that the fact a general election was decided on was not in itself sufficient reason why I—and my colleagues feel the same—should separate from the National Government," he said.

TARIFF QUESTION

"Meantime an issue has been raised apart from, but in some respects connected, with a great financial emergency. A powerful political party which provided by far the greatest volume of support to Parliament for the present government, had labored long to establish in the country a system of protection which it was convinced would be superior to that of the nation. It became that, in normal circumstances those efforts were due to be crowned with success. But not unnaturally, it was unwilling to see the opportunity slip."

Sir Herbert said a new aspect had become apparent in the tariff controversy, due to the serious fall in export trade in recent years. "There was a strong expert opinion that during this year we would have to provide exchange to the amount of about $2,000,000 each week in order to overcome the unfavorable balance of trade."

"But in general, with regard to permanent tariffs as proposed many years past by the Conservative Party," he said, "it may be right or wrong, but the proposal is not directly related in our view to the present emergency. If this question is raised and pressed and made the dominant question of the general election, it is not possible the National Government, consisting of men of all parties, could endorse a general proposal of that kind."

EFFORTS TO AGREE

Premier MacDonald, Sir Herbert continued, had invited his colleagues to consider whether they could arrive at an agreed policy and for some days they have been engaged in seeking for what was called a formula. But it became clear the Conservatives would not be free to agree to any declaration of kind which did not at least in some degree, pledge the new Parliament to a policy of restriction of imports.

On the other hand, the Liberals felt strongly they could not subscribe to any declaration which contained an explicit pledge of such nature.

BALDWIN'S STATEMENT

Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, Conservative leader, in his manifesto yesterday, said in part:

"The position of agriculture is one which, in my judgment, is so desperate as to call for immediate far-reaching measures. To this end the first step should be assistance to the cereal farmer, and we have in no way changed our view in that regard. The Government is by the best form of assistance is by means of the quota, and a guaranteed price for wheat."

"The farmers must be secured against dumping, which has brought so many branches of our industry to the verge of ruin. The production of food at home should be increased and the drain of men from the land should be stopped. And to this end we should make Imperial treaties which may be of enormous value to us as a nation. We shall require such a free hand as will enable us to impose protective quotas or duties as may be most effective in the circumstances."

WHEAT QUOTAS

"The problem of the Empire is to secure the economic unity for which we have so long striven. I hope the reasons which led to the suspension of the Ottawa Empire Economic conference have been overcome and that it will be possible for the Canadian Government to renew its invitation."

"We shall then have a unique opportunity before us in the fact that it will fall to a National Government to accept that invitation."

CONFERENCE PLAN

Hon. R. H. Pooley, Attorney General, will address a public meeting of the Sooke Conservative Association in the Sooke Hall to-morrow at 8.15 o'clock.

At the close of the meeting refreshments will be served and a short dance will follow.

Sir James Douglas P.T.A. Prepares For Winter Activities

Election of officers and plans for the annual bazaar of the association, to be held on November 23, featured the meeting of the Sir James Douglas Parent-Teacher Association yesterday evening.

E. B. Jones was named president. Other officers elected were as follows: Vice-president, Mrs. D. W. P. Maunsell; second vice-president, R. V. James; treasurer, Mrs. Fairweather; recording secretary, A. B. McNeill, and executive committee, Mrs. W. C. Moresby, Mrs. Crawford, Mrs. Moffitt, Mrs. J. Cameron, Miss Bowes, Mrs. Bowden and W. H. Wilson.

Mr. Wilson, principal of the school, moved a vote of thanks to the retiring president and secretary.

A committee of five was appointed to make arrangements for the bazaar. The association decided to forward a letter to the school board, asking it to drain and resurface the school grounds since they were considered dangerous in their present condition.

BARNJUM BUYS MORE TIMBER

Another Tract of Douglas Fir Giant Near Cowichan to Miss Aze

Frank J. D. Barnjum, noted conservationist of Montreal, has purchased through the office of R. W. Hibbertson, forest engineer, another tract of virgin growth big trees in the Shilam district near Cowichan, to add to his previous holdings. These tracts purchased by Mr. Barnjum contain some of the largest Douglas Fir trees now remaining on the Pacific Coast, some of which measure twelve feet in diameter and 300 feet in height and are 900 or more years of age.

Mr. Barnjum says, after noting the destruction that is now taking place in the Cameron Lake tract under the guise of widening a road that was far more attractive as it was, that he will not rest till he has saved from the axe the few remaining tracts of these big trees in the Cowichan Lake district. The only way that this seems possible to him is through their immediate purchase, as otherwise they will all have disappeared in a comparatively short time. Mr. Barnjum says the cutting down of these few old-growth trees is a "crime" and he would be glad to see them torn down the Pyramids of Egypt. He thinks it is merely a waste of money to build expensive highways when the scenic attraction that is the reason for spending such huge sums to construct, is being so rapidly, ruthlessly and hideously destroyed. The Cameron Lake tract is the only remaining piece of virgin timber on the Vancouver Island Highway.

TEMPERAMENT AND TEMPER

Dr. Alexander Explains Difference in His Lecture at Chamber of Commerce

An interested audience heard Dr. W. G. Alexander's lecture at the Chamber of Commerce yesterday evening on the difference between temperament and temper. Temperament was a tendency both physical and mental grew by anatomical and physiological development, he said. He claimed that temper was simply ungoverned force and that the one having the greatest temper could have the greatest control.

The lecturer showed how the brightest children are often injured by the vanity of their parents in wanting them to "show off" when they should be in bed. He also showed how physical defects or diseased conditions retarded the mental development of the child. He contrasted the slow developing motive temperament with the faster, vital, temperamental and why the latter was usually misunderstood by both parents and teachers. To-night the lectures will be on "Health and Happiness."
